Emblems
and
The Manuscript Tradition

Including an Edition and Studies of a Newly Discovered Manuscript of Poetry by Tristan l’Hermite

Volume edited by Laurence Grove

GLASGOW: GLASGOW EMBLEM STUDIES; 1997
Contents

Acknowledgements ................................................................. VI

Introduction .................................................................................. VII

Daniel Russell
Thoughts on a Newly Discovered Manuscript Version of Gomberville’s Doctrine des Moeurs (1646) ........................................ 1

Alison Saunders
Whose intellectual property? The Liber Fortunae of Jean Cousin, Imbert d’Anlézy or Ludovic Lalanne? ........................................ 19

Sandra Sider
Luís Nunes Tinoco’s Architectural Emblematic Imagery in Seventeenth-Century Portugal: Making a Name for a Palatine Princess ........................................................................... 63

Gillian Wright
The Growth of an Emblem: Some Contexts for Bodleian Library MS Ashmole 767 ................................................................. 81

Laurence Grove
Glasgow University Library SMAdd.392: an Introduction ........ 101

Stephen Rawles
The Bibliographical Context of Glasgow University Library SMAdd.392: a Preliminary Analysis ................................................ 105

Alison Adams
Manuscript Texts from Glasgow University Library SMAdd.392 ......................................................................................... 119
Acknowledgements

Once again thanks are due to David Weston, Keeper of Special Collections, Glasgow University Library, for providing access to the books in his charge during a difficult period, during which his whole department and bookstock moved 150 feet upwards. Stephen Rawles has again helped in the preparation of the illustrations and camera-ready copy; the usual high standard of support was provided by the University of Glasgow Computing Service. We are grateful to all the libraries whose books are illustrated here for waiving their reproduction fees.