Revolutionary Paris and the Market for Netherlandish Art

By

Darius A. Spieth

With a Foreword by

Marc Fumaroli

BRILL
LEIDEN | BOSTON
Contents

Acknowledgements  ix
Foreword  xii
A Note on Currencies  xviii

1 From Eyesores to Blue Chip Art  1
Origins of the Parisian Marketplace for Netherlandish Painting  20
Art Publications and the Dissemination of Information  30
France as International Tastemaker for Golden Age Art After 1740  40
Royal Collections and Northern Masters, 1777–1792  44
The Twilight of the Auction Business, 1775–1825  65
The Fate of Golden Age Art Under Terror and Inflation  70
The Louvre and the “Artistic Conquests” in Belgium and the Netherlands  78
The Post-Revolutionary Market for Netherlandish Art  86
The Expanding Mass Market for Copies and the Rise of the Bourgeoisie  100
Golden Age Art and Popular Culture  112
Netherlandish versus Italian Art  120
The Parisian Apartment – a Bourgeois Space for Art  125

2 On the Art of Surviving the Revolution: Jean-Baptiste Pierre Lebrun  128
Art Dealer to the Ancien Régime’s Elite, 1776–1789  139
Painful Adjustments, 1789–1795  149
Co-Conspirator of Jacques-Louis David, 1792–1794  182
From The Ministry of Finance to the Louvre, 1794–1799  206
A Long Good-Bye from the Louvre, 1799–1803  218
A Difficult Comeback as Dealer-Expert, 1801–1804  224
Deceptions of the Napoleonic Age, 1807–1813  239
3 A Long Good Bye to the Palais Royal: The Northern Pictures in the Orléans Collection 246
   The Art Collections in the Palais Royal until 1780 248
   Inside the Art Deal of the Century 262
   The Netherlandish Pictures of the Palais Royal Collection 280
   A Look Inside the Galeries De Bois 323

4 Liberty's Toll on Beauty's Price 336
   Myths and Realities of the Parisian Auction Market in the 1790s 347
   Turnover of the Parisian Art Auction Market and its Economic Context, ca. 1775–1850 374
   The Evolution of Prices for Netherlandish Art in Revolutionary Paris 387
   Bidding Wars: The Picture Trade with Great Britain 395
   The “Guilty Industry” and Netherlandish Art 400

5 Netherlandish Art in France: A History of Taste and Money across Three Centuries 405
   Poussinists versus Rubenists 408
   The Marquis d'Argens and Academic Prejudices Against Northern Art 412
   The Re-Evaluation of Netherlandish Aesthetics from David to Thoré 417
   The Politicization of Netherlandish Art in the Nineteenth Century 421
   Class, Taste, and the First Art Price Rankings 427

Appendix 433
Bibliography 435
List of Illustrations 468
Photograph Credits 478
Index 480