The Color-Processing Machinery

Opponent Process Theory

Channel Properties

Principles for Design

Showing Detail

Color-Coding Information

Large and Small Areas

Emphasis and Highlighting

Color Sequences

Color on Shaded Surfaces

Semantics of Color

Conclusion

Getting the Information: Visual Space and Time

Depth Perception and Cue Theory

Stereoscopic Depth

Structure from Motion

2.5D Design

How Much of the Third Dimension?

Affordances

The Where Pathway

Artificial Interactive Spaces

Space Traversal and Cognitive Costs

Conclusion

Visual Objects, Words, and Meaning

The Inferotemporal Cortex and the What Channel

Generalized Views from Patterns

Structured Objects

Gist and Scene Perception

Visual and Verbal Working Memory

Verbal Working Memory

Control of the Attention and the Cognitive Process

Long-term Memory

Priming

Getting into Visual Working Memory

Thinking in Action: Receiving a Cup of Coffee

Elaborations and Implications for Design

Make Objects Easy to Identify

Novelty

Images as Symbols

Meaning and Emotion

Imagery and Desire