

Introduction	p. v
Author's Preface	p. 1
Religion and Neurology	p. 3
Introduction: the course is not anthropological, but deals with personal documents
Questions of fact and questions of value
In point of fact, the religious are often neurotic
Criticism of medical materialism, which condemns religion on that account
Theory that religion has a sexual origin refuted
All states of mind are neurally conditioned
Their significance must be tested not by their origin but by the value of their fruits
Three criteria of value; origin useless as a criterion
Advantages of the psychopathic temperament when a superior intellect goes with it Especially for the religious life
Circumscription of the Topic	p. 21
Futility of simple definitions of religion
No one specific "religious sentiment"
Institutional and personal religion
We confine ourselves to the personal branch
Definition of religion for the purpose of these lectures
Meaning of the term "divine"
The divine is what prompts solemn reactions
Impossible to make our definitions sharp
We must study the more extreme cases
Two ways of accepting the universe
Religion is more enthusiastic than philosophy
Its characteristic is enthusiasm in solemn emotion
Its ability to overcome unhappiness
Need of such a faculty from the biological point of view
The Reality of the Unseen	p. 41
Percepts versus abstract concepts
Influence of the latter on belief
Kant's theological Ideas
We have a sense of reality other than that given by the special senses
Examples of "sense of presence"
The feeling of unreality
Sense of a divine presence: examples
Mystical experiences: examples
Other cases of sense of God's presence
Convincingness of unreasoned experience

Inferiority of rationalism in establishing belief

Either enthusiasm or solemnity may preponderate in the religious attitude of individuals

The Religion of Healthy-Mindedness

p. 60

Happiness is man's chief concern

"Once-born" and "twice-born" characters

Walt Whitman

Mixed nature of Greek feeling

Systematic healthy-mindedness

Its reasonableness

Liberal Christianity shows it

Optimism as encouraged by Popular Science

The "Mind-cure" movement

Its creed

Cases

Its doctrine of evil

Its analogy to Lutheran theology

Salvation by relaxation

Its methods: suggestion

Meditation

"Recollection"

Verification

Diversity of possible schemes of adaptation to the universe

Two mind-cure cases

The Sick Soul

p. 96

Healthy-mindedness and repentance

Essential pluralism of the healthy-minded philosophy

Morbid-mindedness: its two degrees

The pain-threshold varies in individuals

Insecurity of natural goods

Failure, or vain success of every life

Pessimism of all pure naturalism

Hopelessness of Greek and Roman view

Pathological unhappiness

"Anhedonia"

Querulous melancholy

Vital zest is a pure gift

Loss of it makes physical world look different

Tolstoy

Bunyan

Alline

Morbid fear

Such cases need a supernatural religion for relief
Antagonism of healthy-mindedness and morbidness
The problem of evil cannot be escaped
The Divided Self, and the Process of Its Unification p. 125
Heterogeneous personality
Character gradually attains unity
Examples of divided self
The unity attained need not be religious
"Counter conversion" cases
Other cases
Gradual and sudden unification
Tolstoy's recovery
Bunyan's
Conversion p. 142
Case of Stephen Bradley
The psychology of character-changes
Emotional excitements make new centres of personal energy
Schematic ways of representing this Starbuck likens conversion to normal moral ripening
Leuba's ideas
Seemingly unconvertible persons
Two types of conversion
Subconscious incubation of motives
Self-surrender
Its importance in religious history
Cases
Conversion--Concluded p. 162
Cases of sudden conversion
Is suddenness essential?
No, it depends on psychological idiosyncrasy
Proved existence of transmarginal, or subliminal, consciousness
"Automatisms"
Instantaneous conversions seem due to the possession of an active subconscious self by the subject
The value of conversion depends not on the process, but on the fruits
These are not superior in sudden conversion
Professor Coe's views
Sanctification as a result
Our psychological account does not exclude direct presence of the Deity
Sense of higher control
Relations of the emotional "faith-state" to intellectual beliefs
Leuba quoted

Characteristics of the faith-state: sense of truth; the world appears new

Sensory and motor automatisms

Permanency of conversions

Saintliness

p. 193

Sainte-Beuve on the State of Grace

Types of character as due to the balance of impulses and inhibitions

Sovereign excitements

Irascibility

Effects of higher excitement in general

The saintly life is ruled by spiritual excitement

This may annul sensual impulses permanently

Probable subconscious influences involved

Mechanical scheme for representing permanent alteration in character

Characteristics of saintliness

Sense of reality of a higher power

Peace of mind, charity

Equanimity, fortitude, etc.

Connection of this with relaxation

Purity of life

Asceticism

Obedience

Poverty

The sentiments of democracy and of humanity

General effects of higher excitements

The Value of Saintliness

p. 243

It must be tested by the human value of its fruits

The reality of the God must, however, also be judged

"Unfit" religions get eliminated by "experience"

Empiricism is not skepticism

Individual and tribal religion

Loneliness of religious originators

Corruption follows success

Extravagances

Excessive devoutness, as fanaticism

As theopathic absorption

Excessive purity

Excessive charity

The perfect man is adapted only to the perfect environment

Saints are leavens

Excesses of asceticism

Asceticism symbolically stands for the heroic life

Militarism and voluntary poverty as possible equivalents

Pros and cons of the saintly character

Saints versus "strong" men

Their social function must be considered

Abstractly the saint is the highest type, but in the present environment it may fail, so we make ourselves saints at our peril

The question of theological truth

Mysticism

p. 281

Mysticism defined

Four marks of mystic states

They form a distinct region of consciousness

Examples of their lower grades

Mysticism and alcohol

"The anaesthetic revelation"

Religious mysticism

Aspects of Nature

Consciousness of God

"Cosmic consciousness"

Yoga

Buddhistic mysticism

Sufism

Christian mystics

Their sense of revelation

Tonic effects of mystic states

They describe by negatives

Sense of union with the Absolute

Mysticism and music

Three conclusions

Mystical states carry authority for him who has them

But for no one else

Nevertheless, they break down the exclusive authority of rationalistic states

They strengthen monistic and optimistic hypotheses

Philosophy

p. 319

Primacy of feeling in religion, philosophy being a secondary function

Intellectualism professes to escape subjective standards in her theological constructions

"Dogmatic theology"

Criticism of its account of God's attributes

"Pragmatism" as a test of the value of conceptions

God's metaphysical attributes have no practical significance

His moral attributes are proved by bad arguments; collapse of systematic theology

Does transcendental idealism fare better? Its principles

Quotations from John Caird

They are good as restatements of religious experience, but uncoercive as reasoned proof

What philosophy can do for religion by transforming herself into "science of religions"

Other Characteristics

p. 339

Aesthetic elements in religion

Contrast of Catholicism and Protestantism

Sacrifice and Confession

Prayer

Religion holds that spiritual work is really effected in prayer

Three degrees of opinion as to what is effected

First degree

Second degree

Third degree

Automatisms, their frequency among religious leaders

Jewish cases

Mohammed

Joseph Smith

Religion and the subconscious region in general

Conclusions

p. 359

Summary of religious characteristics

Men's religions need not be identical

"The science of religions" can only suggest, not proclaim, a religious creed

Is religion a "survival" of primitive thought?

Modern science rules out the concept of personality

Anthropomorphism and belief in the personal characterized pre-scientific thought

Personal forces are real, in spite of this

Scientific objects are abstractions, only individualized experiences are concrete

Religion holds by the concrete

Primarily religion is a biological reaction

Its simplest terms are an uneasiness and a deliverance; description of the deliverance

Question of the reality of the higher power

The author's hypotheses

The subconscious self as intermediating between nature and the higher region

The higher region, or "God"

He produces real effects in nature

Postscript

p. 385

Philosophic position of the present work defined as piecemeal supernaturalism

Criticism of universalistic supernaturalism

Different principles must occasion differences in fact

What differences in fact can God's existence occasion?

The question of immortality

Question of God's uniqueness and infinity: religious experience does not settle this question in the affirmative

The pluralistic hypothesis is more conformed to common sense
