Introduction
Thoughts on Friends and Other Noteworthy Persons
Milton Friedman and His Memoirs
Adam Smith, Including Thoughts on Ken Galbraith and David Ricardo
George Stigler and the Chicago School of Economics
Gary Becker, the Great Economic Imperialist
Robert Mundell, the Father of International Macroeconomics
Bob Lucas and Rational Expectations
Larry Summers, the Economist as Treasury Secretary and Harvard President
Bono, the Rock Star as Amateur Economist
Domingo Cavallo--The Second Coming of the Argentine Savior?
Al Gore in the Balance
George W. Bush and Compassionate Conservatism
Joe DiMaggio
Economics of Social Issues
The Economics of Beauty
Abortion and Crime
Colombia and U.S. Drug Policy
SAT Scores and Meritocracy in Higher Education
Napster, Prozac, and Intellectual Property Rights
Microsoft and Antitrust Policy
Personal Accounts for Social Security: Not a Free Lunch
Economic Growth, Democracy, and Things International
Eastern Germany--A Lesson in Welfare Dependency
Inequality and Economic Growth
Democracy in the New Congo?
Chile's Presidential Election
Mexico's New Democracy
Dollarization in Russia?
Yankee Imperialism in Asia
Dollarization and the Grand Ecuadorean Experiment
My Brief Tenure at the World Economic Forum
What to Do with the International Monetary Fund?
Fiscal Policy, Monetary Policy, and the Macroeconomy
Budgets and Tax Cuts
September 11 and the War on Terror--What Does It Mean for the Economy?
Fiscal Profligacy at the American Economic Association
It's the Economy--Economic Evaluations of the U.S. Presidents
Serious and Nonserious Fiscal Reforms
Mr. Greenspan and U.S. Monetary Policy
And the Winner of the 2000 U.S. Presidential Election Was ...