List of contributors

Preface

Acknowledgements

General introduction

Understanding distance education

Three types of interaction

Problems of distance education

Distance education in the society of the future: from partial understanding to conceptual frameworks

Broadening the definition of distance education in light of the new telecommunications technologies

A duty for distance education in the 1990s

A typology of distance teaching systems

Student persistence in distance education: a cross-cultural multi-institutional perspective

The economics of mass distance education

Open universities - the test of all models

A two-level strategy for mastery learning in distance education

Some instructional strategies for improved learning from distance teaching materials

Electronic mail in a children's distance course: trial and evaluation

Technology for distance education: a ten-year prospective

Telephone teaching and audio-conferencing at the British Open University

Multifunction microcomputer enhanced audio teleconferencing: moving into the third generation of distance education

The coming of the new distance educators in the United States: the telecommunications generation takes off

IBM distance learning developments using videoconferencing

Open universities: the new temples of learning

National developments and international cooperation in distance education in Commonwealth Africa

China: its distance higher-education system

Refugees and distance education

Academic education of distance educators

Media and distance education: course description

Strategies for collaborative staff training in distance education

Key issues in distance education: an academic viewpoint

Index

Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.