Synopsis and Acknowledgments  p. xiii
Preface: Black History as Labor History  p. xvii
Introduction: The Power of Remembering  p. 1
Segregation, Racial Violence, and Black Workers  p. 15
Fannie Henderson Witnesses Southern Lynch Law  p. 20
William Glover Recounts His Frame-up by the Memphis Police  p. 23
Longshore Leader Thomas Watkins Escapes Assassination  p. 29
From Country to City: Jim Crow at Work  p. 43
Hillie and Laura Pride Move to Memphis  p. 49
Matthew Davis Describes Heavy Industrial Work  p. 54
George Holloway Remembers the Crump Era  p. 59
Clarence Coe Recalls the Pressures of White Supremacy  p. 72
Making a Way Out of No Way: Black Women Factory Workers  p. 86
Irene Branch Does Double Duty as a Domestic and Factory Worker  p. 93
Evelyn Bates Reflects on Her Lifetime of Factory Work  p. 99
Susie Wade Tells How She Built a Life around Work  p. 108
Rebecca McKinley Remembers the Strike at Memphis  p. 114
Furniture Company  p. 123
Interlude: Not What We Seem  p. 123
Freedom Struggles at the Point of Production  p. 132
Clarence Coe Fights for Equality  p. 136
Lonnie Roland and other Black Workers Implement the Brown Decision on the Factory Floor  p. 150
George Holloway's Struggle against White Worker Racism  p. 154
Organizing and Surviving in the Cold War  p. 177
Leroy Clark Follows the Pragmatic Road to Survival in the Jim Crow South  p. 183
Leroy Boyd Battles White Supremacy in the Era of the Red Scare  p. 194
Interlude: Arts of Resistance  p. 213
Civil Rights Unionism  p. 237
Leroy Boyd Tells How Black Workers Used the Movement for Civil Rights to Revive Local 19  p. 241
Factory Worker Matthew Davis Becomes a Community Leader  p. 247
Edward Lindsey Recalls Black Union Politics  p. 255
Alzada and Leroy Clark Fight for Unionism and Civil Rights  p. 261
Alzada Clark Organizes Black Women Workers in Mississippi  p. 271
"I Am a Man": Unionism and the Black Working Poor  p. 286
Taylor Rogers Relives the Memphis Sanitation Strike  p. 293
James Robinson Describes the Worst Job He Ever Had  p. 302
Leroy Boyd and Clarence Coe Recall a Strike and the Death of Martin Luther King  p. 309
William Lucy Reflects on the Strike's Meaning and Outcome  p. 314
The Fate of the Black Working Class: The Global Economy, Racism, and Union Organizing  p. 322