The Astronomy without Equants
Principles versus Tables without Demonstrations
The Publication of De Revolutionibus: Osiander's "Ad Lectorem"
Holy Scripture and Celestial Order
De Revolutionibus: Title and Prefatory Material
The "Principal Consideration"
The Wittenberg Interpretation of Copernicus's Theory
Melanchthon and the Science of the Stars at Wittenberg
The Melanchthon Circle, Rheticus, and Albertine Patronage
Rheticus, Melanchthon, and Copernicus: A Psychodynamic Hypothesis
Erasmus Reinhold, Albrecht, and the Formation of the Wittenberg Interpretation
The Prutenic Tables, Patronage, and the Organization of Heavenly Literature
The Consolidation of the Wittenberg Interpretation
The Advanced Curriculum at Wittenberg
Germany as the "Nursery of Mathematics"
Conclusion
Varieties of Astrological Credibility
Marking the Dangers of Human Foreknowledge
Becoming a Successful Prognosticator
Multiplying Genitures
From Wittenberg to Louvain: Astrological Credibility and the Copernican Question
John Dee and Louvain: Toward an Optical Reformation of Astrology
Jofrancus Offusius's Semi-Ptolemaic Solution to the Variation in Astral Powers
Skirting the Margins of Dangerous Divination
Foreknowledge, Skepticism, and Celestial Order in Rome
De Revolutionibus at the Papal Court: A Stillborn (Negative) Reaction
The Holy Index and the Science of the Stars
Making Orthodoxy: Learned Advice from Trent
Astrology, Astronomy, and the Certitude of Mathematics in Post-Tridentine Heavenly Science
The Jesuits' "Way of Proceeding": The Teaching Ministry, the Middle Sciences, Astrology, and Celestial Order
Clavius on the Order of the Planets
Disciplinary Tensions
Astronomy in a Hexameral Genre: Robert Bellarmine
Accommodating Unanticipated, Singular Novelties
Planetary Order, Astronomical Reform, and the Ordinary Course of Nature
Astronomical Reform and the Interpretation of Celestial Signs
The New Piconians
Mistrusting Numbers
The Rise of the Theoretical Astronomer and the "Science" of the New Star of 1572
The Generic Location of the New Star
Court Spaces and Networks: Uraniborg, Hapsburg Vienna and Prague
Hagecius's Polemic on the New Star
An Emergent Role for a Noble Astronomer: Tycho Brahe and the Copenhagen Oration
Tycho and Pico, Generic and Named Adversaries
The Tychonian Problematic, 1574
A Tychonic Solution to Pico's Criticism? Naibod's Circumsolar Ordering of Mercury and Venus
The Comet of 1577 and Its Discursive Space
Astrological and Eschatological Meanings of Comets
The Language, Syntax, and Credibility of Cometary Observation
Place and Order, the Comet and the Cosmos: Gemma, Roeslin, Maestlin, and Brahe
Conclusion
The Second-Generation Copernicans: Maestlin and Digges
Michael Maestlin (1550-1631): Pastor, Academic, Mathematicus, Copernican
Maestlin's Hesitations about Astrology
The Practice of Theorizing: Maestlin's Glosses on Copernicus
Thomas Digges: Gentleman, Mathematical Practitioner, Platonist, Copernican
Digges on Copernicus in Wings or Ladders
(Re)Classifying the Star
The Mathematicians' Court
Reorganizing Copernicus
Thomas Digges's Infinite Universe "Augmentation" in Leonard Digges's Prognostication Euerlastinge
The Plummet Passage
Conclusion

A Proliferation of Readings
The Emergence of a Via Media
Along the Via Media: Tycho's Progress
Negotiating the Spheres' Ontology
Rothmann's Transformation and the First Copernican Controversy
Giordano Bruno: "Academico di nulla Academia detto il Fastidito"
Bruno's Visual, Pythagorean Reading of Copernicus
Bruno and the Science of the Stars
Securing the Divine Plan
The Emergence of Kepler's Copernican Representation
The Copernican Situation at the End of the 1580s
Counterfactual Kepler
Kepler's Copernican Formation at Tübingen, 1590-1594
Kepler's Shift in the Astronomer's Role
Kepler's Physical-Astrological Problematic and Pico
Dating Kepler's Encounter with Pico: A Tübingen Scenario?
The Gold Nugget