

Resistance to new technology and its effects on nuclear power, information technology and biotechnology

The crisis of 'progress'

Reinterpreting 'Luddism': resistance to new technology in the British industrial revolution

The changeability of public opinions about new technology: assimilation effects in attitude surveys

'Technophobia': a misleading conception of resistance to new technology

Patterns of resistance to new technologies in Scandinavia: an historical perspective

Henry Ford's relationship to 'Fordism': ambiguity as a modality of technological resistance

Resistance to nuclear technology: optimists, opportunists and opposition in Australian nuclear history

New technology in Fleet Street, 1975-80

The impact of resistance to biotechnology in Switzerland: a sociological view of the recent referendum

The politics of resistance to new technology: semiconductor diffusion in France and Japan until 1965

User resistance to new interactive media: participants, processes and paradigms

The impact of anti-nuclear power movements in international comparison

In the engine of history: regulators of biotechnology, 1970-86

Product, process, or programme: three cultures and the regulation of biotechnology

Learning from Chernobyl for the fight against genetics? Stages and stimuli of German protest movements - a comparative synopsis

Individual and institutional impacts upon press coverage of sciences: the case of nuclear power and genetic engineering in Germany

Forms of intrusion: comparing resistance to information technology and biotechnology in the USA

Towards a functional analysis of resistance

Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.