1921-1939 The Roots of the Problem
The constitutional compromise
The economy society - the Protestants - the Catholics

1940-1968 - The Limits of Modernization

The welfare state
The 50s - social change and political stagnation - the economy - the ruling classes - government, parties, and population - the minority population
The 60s - O'Neillism and its failure - O'Neill and his policies, loyalist opposition to O'Neill, the catholic response, 1968-9 - too little too late, too much too soon?

1969-1989 - The Problem Exposed

The last years of unionist government, 1969-1972 - civil rights, people's democracy and socialism the revival, split and growth of the IRA
Protestant militants and extremists the army and British politics constitutional nationalism and Dublin's policies
Chichester-Clark and Faulkner - fighting for survival
Stormont suspended - the search for new forms of government - wooing the unionists - from direct rule to Sunningdale the power-sharing executive and the Ulster Workers strike the war of the paramilitaries "the troubles" and the people - a society under stress?

Unionism divided the 80s - political stalemate and vested interests - economic and social conditions paramilitary initiatives - the H-Block protest and the hunger-strike

British initiatives - from the Northern Ireland Assembly to the Anglo-Irish Agreement living with the Anglo-Irish Agreement - regional politics

Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.