problems with logicism autonomy, implementation and cognitive architecture - a reply to Fodor and Pylyshyn connectionism, classical cognitive science, and experimental psychology against logicist cognitive science I - the core argument against logicist cognitive science II - objections and replies reasoning theories and bounded rationality bounded rationality in taking risks and drawing inferences logicism and everyday reasoning - mental methods and mental logic the falsity of folk theories - implications for psychology and philosophy. Part II: the probabilistic approach a rational analysis of the selection task I - optimal data selection a rational analysis of the selection task II - abstract materials a rational analysis of the selection task III - thematic materials a rational analysis of the selection task IV - implications rational explanation of the selection task information gain explains relevance, which explains the selection current developments and future directions

Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.