List of contributors p. v
Foreword p. vii
Acknowledgements p. xii
Fire and the body: Fire and the people p. 1
Flesh, fire, and funerary remains from the Neolithic site of La Varde, Guernsey: Investigations past and present p. 19
Past cremation practices from a bioarchaeological perspective: How new methods and techniques revealed conceptual changes in cremation practices during the late Bronze Age and early Iron Age in Denmark p. 43
The weight of the matter: Examining the potential of skeletal weight for the bioarchaeological analysis of cremation at the Iron Age necropolis of Tera (Portugal) p. 63
Funerary rituals and ideologies in the Phoenician-Punic necropolis of Monte Sirai (Carbonia, Sardinia, Italy) p. 97
The funerary practice of cremation at Augusta Emerita (Mérida, Spain) during High Empire: contributions from the anthropological analysis of burned human bone p. 123
The integration of microscopic techniques in cremation studies: A new approach to understanding social identity among cremation practicing groups from early Anglo-Saxon England p. 151
Analysing cremated human remains from the southern Brazilian highlands: Interpreting archaeological evidence of funerary practice at mound and enclosure complexes in the Pelotas River Valley p. 173
Case applications of recent research on thermal effects on the skeleton p. 213
The interpretation and reconstruction of the post-mortem events in a case of scattered burned remains in Chile p. 227
Conclusion p. 243
Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.