
Museums in the Information Age p. 1
The Micro Gallery - Observations from three projects: London; San Diego; Washington D.C. p. 13
The Library of Congress's National Digital Library Program p. 21
The Catalogue of Canadian Art on CD-ROM at the National Gallery of Canada p. 26
Multimedia in Russian Museums p. 33
The Rembrandt Watermark Project Compact Disk p. 39
Laser Videodisc Technology - A Tool for Collections Management at the McMichael Canadian Art Collection p. 46
The Methodology of Creating a Hypermedia System - A Case Study of an Interactive Dictionary and Illustrated Guide to Ichthyology p. 53
Another Tool in the Toolbox - Prototyping a Visitor Orientation Program for the Freer Gallery of Art p. 60
Use and Embedding of Interactive Media in a Museum of Contemporary History p. 70
Technology, Orientations, and the Land of Oz p. 86
Cleopatra: An Interactive Guide to Art of the Ancient World p. 93
Hypermedia development in the Benaki Museum - Adapting the beast to the beauty: a case study p. 107
Is Anybody Out There? (museums, audiences and the World Wide Web) p. 115
Brokering Access to Heritage Information - CHIN's Strategy for the 90's p. 123
Web Objects Time: When Microsoft Started Speaking Like a Good Open-Standards Citizen, The Netscape Extensions Tail Tried To Wag The Dog and Object-Oriented Software Turned Static Web Pages Into Dynamically-Linked Access Boulevards To Significant Online Collection Databases p. 131
Teachers' Materials on the Internet - a Progress Report p. 135
The Challenges of Developing a Collection of Primary Information, Media Sources and a Virtual Collection of Architectural and Artistic Works: An Experience at the Universidad Catolica de Chile p. 141
One common Database System for 150 Small Social History Museums p. 150
Korean Culture and Arts Information Network p. 158
Collaboration between Research and Development Interests - The Case of The Digital Weather Station Exhibit p. 178
Teamwork and the Museum Interactive: First Experience with the Hybrid Model at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art p. 187
The Silver Dart Project - Analysis of a Partnership p. 201
Towards the Global Village - The Strategic Alliance between the Canadian Museum of Civilization and Digital Equipment of Canada p. 209
New Media and Emerging Technologies - Staying Interactive in the High Tech Environment, a White Paper and Licensor Oriented Content License Agreement p. 219
Overcoming Copyright and Other Intellectual Property Complexities and Protecting and Exploiting Intellectual Property Rights in Museums p. 249
Legal Aspects of Multimedia in Europe p. 264
Low Light Photography of Paintings p. 279
Beyond WWW and HTML - Standards for Cultural Heritage Information: The RAMA Perspective p. 281
Digital Fidelity in an Age of Immaculate and Pernicious Reproduction p. 283