Cooperating with written texts: Towards a science of the text. Issues and overview p. 1
Writing, literacy, and comprehension: psycholinguistic aspects p. 13
On the relationship between writing system, written language, and text processing p. 15
Pause and intonation contours in written and oral discourse p. 31
Aspects of writing development in argumentative texts p. 67
Psycholinguistic processes in the comprehension of written texts p. 83
Coherence and coordination in written text: Reading time studies p. 103
Levels of language comprehension and systems of information-processing p. 129
Developmental aspects: the evolution of written texts p. 161
The pragmatics of medieval texts p. 163
The impact of sudden literacy on text comprehensibility: Mohawk p. 179
Scientific texts and deictic structures p. 201
Immediacy and displacement in consciousness and language p. 231
Literary texts: inferring meaning(s) p. 257
Fictional conversation and its pragmatic status p. 259
Presupposition and pragmatic inference in a literary text p. 277
How to cope with dramatic texts including avant-garde playscripts p. 295
The pragmatics of literary texts p. 313
"Deep structure signals" in fiction p. 335
The pragmatics of poetic discourse p. 361
A pragmatic role for inserted clauses in literary texts p. 373
Pragmatics and comprehension of individual text types p. 395
Teaching conscientious resistance to cooperation with text: The role of pragmatics in critical thinking p. 397
From private writing to public oration: The case of Puritan wills. Cognitive discourse analysis applied to the study of genre change p. 417
Parallelism in advertising copy p. 437
Notice is hereby given to hide ulterior motives p. 459
Renarration: Oral L1 and L2 narrations as bases of written narratives p. 467
Strategies in text production and text comprehension: A new perspective p. 493
The axiological structure of discourse p. 529
At the interface of linguistics and pragmatics: individual linguistic structures p. 547
On the (In)dependence of syntax and pragmatics: Evidence from the postposition -ra in Persian p. 549
VP inversion and aspect in written texts p. 575
Scope in discourse: Pragmatics or syntax? p. 589
Computational modeling of text comprehension p. 607
'Parsing' procedures for stories p. 609
Convergent evidence for a set of coherence relations p. 631
Text pragmatics and computational modeling p. 665
Integrating knowledge sources for the generation of referential expressions p. 685