Foreword

Old concepts and new approaches

The major lines of metazoan evolution: Summary of traditional evidence and lessons from ribosomal RNA sequence analysis p. 1
Heterologous expression of the membrane proteins that control cellular excitability p. 31

Ligand-gated ion channels

Molluscan ligand-gated ion-channel receptors p. 48
Acetylcholine receptor molecules of the nematode Caenorhabditis elegans p. 65
Acetylcholine receptor/channel molecules of insects p. 81
Muscarinic acetylcholine receptors in invertebrates: Comparisons with homologous receptors from vertebrates p. 98

Pharmacology of the GABA receptor of insect central neurones in culture: A patch-clamp study p. 146
GABA Receptor molecules of insects p. 172
Cloning of a putative GABA[subscript A] receptor from cyclodiene-resistant Drosophila: A case study in the use of insecticide-resistant mutants to isolate neuroreceptors p. 210

Molecular biology of excitatory amino acid receptors: Subtypes and subunits p. 224
Molecular analysis of Drosophila glutamate receptors p. 234
Channels formed by M2 peptides of a putative glutamate receptor subunit of locust p. 241

Single channel properties at the synaptic site p. 250
Second messenger-linked receptors

Structural and functional conservation of serotonin receptors throughout evolution p. 266

The wide range of actions of the FMRFamide-related peptides and the biological importance of peptidergic messengers p. 279
Molecular studies on insect octopamine receptors p. 286
Bioamine receptors: Evolutionary and functional variations of a structural leitmotiv p. 297

Voltage-gated ion channels

Molecular basis of K[superscript +] channel inactivation gating p. 338
Potassium conductance and potassium channels in a primitive insect: The cockroach Periplaneta americana p. 352
Ionic channels in cultured Drosophila neurons p. 366
Receptor diversity and integrative properties of the neurons

The electrophysiological pharmacology of neurotransmitter receptors on locust neuronal somata p. 390
Modulation of insect neurone properties p. 414
Subject Index p. 425
