CONFRONTING ILL HEALTH

Medicines, Self-care and the Poor in Manila

Anita P. Hardon

Health Action Information Network
1991
CONTENTS

Preface

1 Rational use of drugs: professional versus popular views
   1.1 Introduction 1
   1.2 Drug use in Third World Countries 1
   1.3 Rationalizing drug supply and use as an element of primary health care: the public health perspective 3
   1.4 Self-medication: a user's perspective 5
   1.5 Research perspective and approach 9
   1.6 Outline of the book 11
   1.7 Notes 13

2 Research Design
   2.1 Introduction 17
   2.2 Objectives and research questions 17
   2.3 Participatory approach 18
   2.4 Cooperation with Community-Based Health Programs 20
   2.5 Research focus 22
   2.6 Methods 23
   2.7 Research phases 25
   2.8 The calendar method, an evaluation 27
   2.9 Summary and conclusions 34
   2.10 Notes 36

3 Towards rational use of drugs in the Philippines
   3.1 Introduction 37
   3.2 Drug needs and drug consumption 38
      3.2.1 Main health problems 38
      3.2.2 Diagnosis and treatment 40
      3.2.3 Drug consumption patterns 41
   3.3 The health care system 42
   3.4 The pharmaceutical environment in the Philippines 44
      3.4.1 Brand name proliferation 44
      3.4.2 A foreign dominated drug industry 45
   3.5 The National Drug Policy: a quest for change 46
6.6 Towards the comparative analysis 149
6.7 The pharma and homerem indices 149
6.8 Types of medications 154
   6.8.1 Pharmaceutical medications 155
   6.8.2 Types of herbal and home remedies that are used 160
   6.8.3 Common brands 161
6.9 The treatment of other disorders 163
6.10 Medical pharmacological evaluation: professional views 163
6.11 Explanations of the community health workers: traditional remedies versus western pharmaceuticals 167
6.12 Summary and conclusions 167
6.13 Notes 169

7 Symptom-related drug use: doctor's prescriptions 173
   7.1 Introduction 173
   7.2 Prescription habits of physicians in Manila 174
   7.3 Doctors' prescription patterns in relation to self-medication 176
   7.4 Prescriptions available in the households 183
   7.5 Doctors' consultation in severe disorders 184
   7.6 Summary and conclusions 185
   7.7 Notes 187

8 Utilization and dissemination of results 189
   8.1 Introduction 189
   8.2 The use of health research 189
   8.3 Participation of health workers in the research process 190
   8.4 Different utilization levels of research results 192
   8.5 Feedback of results to the people and the community health workers 194
   8.6 Recommendations for action 201
   8.7 The development of simple methods for the study of community drug use 202
   8.8 Summary and conclusions 204
   8.9 Notes 205

9 Confronting ill health and self-medication: conclusions, central issues and policy implications 207
   9.1 Summary and main conclusions of the study 207
   9.2 Central issues and policy implications 214
      9.2.1 Rational drug use: professional versus user views 214
      9.2.2 Drugs and urban primary health care 217
      9.2.3 Implications for a National Essential Drugs Policy 220
   9.3 Notes 221