Contents

Contributors ................................................................. v

Introduction ................................................................. vii

SECTION I: Sociolinguistic and political framework

1 Varieties of English and language teaching ................................................ 3
   Manfred Görlich

2 Caught in a global English trap, or liberated by a lingua franca?
   Unravelling some aims, claims and dilemmas of the English teaching profession ......................................................... 23
   Richard J. Alexander

3 Linguistic dominance or acculturation – problems of teaching
   English as a global language .............................................. 41
   Hero Janßen

SECTION II: Linguistic standardisation, variability of English(es) and problems of mutual intelligibility

4 Standard Englishes, contact varieties and Singapore Englishes .......... 59
   Anthea Fraser Gupta

5 Misunderstanding in intercultural communication: Interactions in English as lingua franca and the myth of mutual intelligibility .......... 73
   Juliane House

SECTION III: Culture(s), intercultural communication and intercultural learning

6 English as a global language. Implications for the cultural content of teaching and learning .................................................. 93
   Peter Doyé

7 From inter-national to intra-national understanding: Teaching peace through foreign language education in post-Cold War Europe ........................................................................ 107
   Lawrence Guntner
"How does newness enter the world?": Salman Rushdie’s The Satanic Verses and global English

Viktor Link

Global and local identities in the contact zone

Claire Kramsch

SECTION IV: Pedagogical implications, new curricula and teacher education

Pedagogical implications of different frameworks for understanding the global spread of English

Alastair Pennycook

English as a global language. Perspectives for English language teaching and for teacher education in Germany

Claus Gnützmann

Languages across the curriculum: A way to promote multilingualism in Europe

Dieter Wolff

SECTION V: Learner-centred approaches and learning objectives

Global English for global players? Responding to the ESP needs of business executives

Gerlinde Mautner

From Macbeth to McDonald’s: Objectives of teaching and learning English as a global language

Meinert A. Meyer

Whose culture does the English language learner want? Two case studies

Roger Bowers

SECTION VI: Methods, media and telecommunication

To know English or not to know English: Some thoughts on the hegemony of English from a methodological point of view, with special reference to German as a Foreign Language

Frank G. Königs
17  Global medium – global resource? Perspectives and paradoxes in using authentic broadcast material for teaching and learning English .................................................................................. 259
Robert Vanderplank

18  Global resources for a global language: English language pedagogy in the modern age ............................................................................................................... 273
Bas Aarts, Gerald Nelson, Sean Wallis

19  English linguistics in a multimedial environment ....................................... 291
Jürgen Handke