Modern Urban Housing in China 1840–2000

Edited by
Lü Junhua, Peter G. Rowe and Zhang Jie

Prestel
Munich • London • New York
Table of Contents

Preface by Wu Liangyong
Introduction by Lü Junhua

Part One: Early Development of Urban Housing in the Semifeudal and Semicolonial Period from 1840 to 1949
Zhang Shouyi and Tan Ying
Introduction
Chapter One: The Emergence of Modern Urban Housing (1840–1910)
Chapter Two: An Important Period for the Early Development of Housing in Modern Cities (1911–1937)
Chapter Three: A Languishing Period in Early Modern Urban Housing (1937–1949)

Part Two: Housing Development in the Socialist Planned Economy from 1949 to 1978
Zhang Jie and Wang Tao
Introduction
Chapter Four: Economic Recovery Following the Soviet Model and Reflections During the First Five-Year Plan (1949–1957)
Chapter Five: The “Great Leap Forward” and Readjustment: Seeking a Road for Self-Development (1958–1965)

Part Three: Housing Development from 1978 to 2000 after China Adopted Reform and Opening-up Policies
Lü Junhua and Shao Lei
Introduction
Chapter Seven: Housing Development at the Beginning of Reform
Conclusion by Peter G. Rowe 283

Bibliography 297