LITERACY, NARRATIVE AND CULTURE

Edited by

Jens Brockmeier, Min Wang and David R. Olson

CURZON
Contents

1 Introduction: What is a culture of literacy? 1
   Jens Brockmeier and David R. Olson

   Part 1: Written culture

2 The literacy episteme: The rise and fall of a cultural discourse 17
   Jens Brockmeier

3 Literacy and the future of writing: An integrational perspective 35
   Roy Harris

4 The construction of mind and self in an interpretive community 52
   Carol Fleisher Feldman

5 Hunting, tracking and reading 67
   J. Edward Chamberlin

6 Narrative distancing: A foundation of literacy 86
   Jerome Bruner

   Part 2: The shaping of modern written culture

7 Letters and pictures in seventeenth-century education 97
   John H. Astington

8 Painters and literacy 110
   William Blissett

9 “Dumb significant” and Early Modern English definition 131
   Ian Lancashire

10 The spread of culture: Subscription libraries in France in the nineteenth century 155
    Graham Falconer
Contents

11 The essay as a literary and academic form: Closed gate or open door? 170
Margaret Procter

Part 3: Literacy as cultural learning

12 Writing as a form of quotation 187
David R. Olson and Deepthi Kamawar

13 Children’s conceptions of name: A study on metalinguistic awareness in Italian children 199
Ilaria Grazzani Gavazzi and Veronica Ornaghi

14 The distinction between graphic system and orthographic system and their pertinence for understanding the acquisition of orthography 215
Emilia Ferreiro

15 Children’s analysis of oral and written words 229
Sofía A. Vernon

16 Young children’s “clever misunderstandings” about print 245
Janette Pelletier

17 Literacy and metalinguistic thought: Development through knowledge construction and cultural mediation 266
Bruce D. Homer

18 Making new or making do: Epistemological, normative and pragmatic aspects of reading a text 283
Linda M. Phillips

Contributors 301

Subject Index 303

Name Index 309