Accents and Speech in Teaching English Phonetics and Phonology

EFL perspective
Table of Contents

Accents

Accents in Britain today
John Wells, University College London, England......................................................... 9

Early New Estuary English? Its contemporary background
Joanna Przedlacka, University of Warsaw, Poland....................................................... 19

Yod-palatalisation in English in Natural Phonology
Dorota Głowacka, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poland.............................................. 29

(Non)Rhoticity in optimality theory (categorical rules, free variation and fuzzy ranking of constrints)
Przemysław Ostalski, University of Łódź, Poland....................................................... 61

Glottaling in the teenage speech of the Home Counties
Joanna Przedlacka, University of Warsaw, Poland....................................................... 79

Students' awareness of the socio-symbolic values of RP
Janina Ozga and Anna Mańkowska, Jagiellonian University, Poland.......................... 87

Speech

Conscious competence of performance as a key to teaching English
Katarzyna Dziubalska-Kołączyk, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poland......................... 97

'In French is six millions docks.' Where error, please?
Jan Majer, FL Teacher Training College, University of Łódź, Poland.......................... 107

In defence of ‘practical’ phonology
Jolanta Szpyra, Maria Curie-Skłodowska University, Poland....................................... 125

Context for Teaching English Phonetics and Phonology
Ewa Waniek-Klimczak, University of Łódź, Poland................................................... 139

Sick or seek? Pedagogical phonology in teacher training
Jan Majer, FL Teacher Training College, University of Łódź, Poland.......................... 153

English speech in Polish eyes: What university students think about English pronunciation teaching and learning
Włodzimierz Sobkowiak, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poland................................. 177
Applications

Studying rhythm and timing in English speech: Scientific curiosity, or a classroom necessity?
Peter Roach, University of Reading, England .............................................................. 199

The Prosody of English spoken with a Croatian accent
Višnja Josipović, University of Zagreb, Croatia ............................................................ 207

Intonation patterns and turn-taking
Anna Bączkowska, Bydgoszcz Pedagogical University, Poland .............................. 215

How to predict the unpredictable – English word stress from a Polish perspective
Ewa Waniek-Klimczak, University of Łódź, Poland ......................................................... 221

Differences in the scope of obstruent voicing assimilation in learners’ English as a consequence of regional variation in Polish
Robert Lew, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poland ......................................................... 243

How to do it to do it right (?) Is near native-like pronunciation teachable/ learnable?
Klementina Jurancic Petek, University of Maribor, Slovenia ........................................... 265

Teaching pronunciation to Polish primary and secondary school learners of English
Chris Defty, Barbara Nowak, TTC, Jagiellonian University
Agnesia Pietrzak, Jagiellonian University, Poland .......................................................... 275

Micro-narratives in face-to-face interaction
Natalia Mamul, University of Łódź, Poland ................................................................. 281

The perception of English sounds by Polish speakers
Magdalena Deska, University of Łódź, Poland ............................................................... 291

Some issues concerning modular and connectionist approaches to speech processing and production
Anna Bączkowska, Bydgoszcz Pedagogical University, Poland ..................................... 303

The advantage of auditory perceivers and sharpeners in learning foreign language pronunciation
Malgorzata Baran, University of Wrocław and Wrocław FLTT, Poland ....................... 315

Acquisition of the phonological system in childhood developmental aphasia
Kamila Ciepiela, Kielce Pedagogical University & Affiliated College at Piotrków Trybunalski, Poland ................................................................. 329

Bibliography .................................................................................................................. 341