Exporting American Architecture, 1870–2000

Jeffrey W. Cody
Contents

Preface \hspace{1cm} vii
Acknowledgements \hspace{1cm} xi

Introduction

1 Exporting Steel-framed Skeletons of American Modernity

- Expositions of 1876 and 1893: Initial Catalysts for Exporting American Architecture \hspace{1cm} 6
- The Atbara Bridge: U.S. Engineers trump U.K. Competitors in Africa \hspace{1cm} 9
- An Abortive American High-Rise for London’s Strand \hspace{1cm} 14
- Shipping American Skyscrapers Abroad: Milliken Brothers \hspace{1cm} 15
- Alfred Zucker’s High-Rise Skeletons for Buenos Aires \hspace{1cm} 19
- Steel-framed American Workspaces for Export \hspace{1cm} 20
- U.S. Military Victories in 1898: Confidence, Commerce and Construction \hspace{1cm} 22
- Iron and Steel: Primary Genes comprising an Initial Exporting Code \hspace{1cm} 24
- From Components to Systems: the American Construction Specialist \hspace{1cm} 25

2 From the Steel Frame to Concrete: Foundations for a System of Contracting Abroad, 1900–c.1920

- Concrete Components of Architectural Innovation, c. 1900–1914 \hspace{1cm} 32
- The Panama Canal as a Concrete Enterprise, 1904–1914 \hspace{1cm} 35
- Kahn becomes a Popular Concrete System for Export, c. 1905–1914 \hspace{1cm} 37
- Irrational Warfare and Rational Corporate Systems for Construction and Trade, c. 1914–1920 \hspace{1cm} 44

3 American Builders Abroad at a Fork in the Road: Adjust or Go Home, 1918–1930

- ‘New Spirit of Construction?’: Federations of Contractors and their Challenges to Rationalize \hspace{1cm} 54
- ‘Acquiring Mental Angles of Approach’: the AIA’s Foreign Relations Committee, 1920–1930 \hspace{1cm} 59
- Julius Klein’s Four Key Questions \hspace{1cm} 62
- Taking the Longer Road: Building Banks in Argentina and China, 1917–1924 \hspace{1cm} 63
- Taking the Shorter Road: the Fuller Construction Company of the Orient, 1920–1926 \hspace{1cm} 72