Pharmacy Ethics and
Decision Making

Joy Wingfield
LLM, MPhil, BPharm, FRPharmS, Dip Ag Vet Pharm, FCPP
Boots Special Professor of Pharmacy Law and Ethics,
University of Nottingham, UK

David Badcott
PhD, MA, BPharm, MRPharmS
Healthcare philosopher and retired pharmacist,
Centre for Applied Ethics, Cardiff University, UK
Contents

Preface viii
Foreword xi
Introduction xiv
About the authors xvii
Cases xviii
Legislation xix
Abbreviations xxi

1 Ethical theory 1
Why do we need a focus on ethics? 1
Changing times 1
RPSGB guidance 2
What is morality and should we use the term moral or ethical? 4
Ethical norms 4
Facts and values 7
Moral relativism 9
References 22

2 Key moral concepts in healthcare 25
The ‘Georgetown mantra’ 25
Respect for autonomy 27
Justice 31
Human rights 33
Trust and truthfulness 36
Is care a virtue? 39
Clinical pragmatism 43
References 45

3 Moral reasoning 49
Background 51
Rational inquiry 55
The status of emotions in reason 57
Moral reasoning and the pharmacist 59
Moral dilemmas 63
Fallacies 67
References 69
4 Professionalism and accountability
   The nature of professionalism 71
   Pharmacy and professionalism 72
   The ethical basis for professionalism 74
   Accountability 78
   References 92
   Further reading 93

5 The professional decision-making process
   Why have a process for decision-making? 95
   A good decision 96
   Identifying issues and resources 99
   Decision-making systems 102
   References and further reading 111

6 Ethics in practice
   Human rights and healthcare 113
   Capacity and consent 117
   Confidentiality 121
   Vulnerable patient groups 125
   Issues at the beginning and end of life 130
   Conscience clauses 139
   Ethical issues in genetics and pharmacogenetics 143
   Resource allocation 149
   Organisational and business ethics 153
   Research ethics and clinical trials in therapeutic research 156
   Use of animals in research 161
   The pharmaceutical manufacturing industry 163
   Global availability of medicines and developing countries 165
   Essential medicines 167
   Orphan diseases, orphan drugs 168
   AIDS and the regulation of medicines 169
   Stem cell research 173
   References 174
   Further reading 179

7 Worked examples of decision-making
   Imminent changes at the time of writing (August 2006) 181
   Introduction 182
   How to work through the problems 185
   1 Who decides what is an emergency? 187
   The weekend visit of the mother with diabetes
   2 Rational decisions: palliative care versus drug abuse 195
   The clumsy toddler and the spilt medicines
3 A real emergency   201
The teenager and the coleslaw salad
4 Recycling medicines for the Third World   207
The priest in Ethiopia
5 Protecting the reputation of the profession   213
The residential home and the 'rogue' tablets
6 Responsibility for the supply of unlicensed medicines   221
The child and the Phenergan Elixir
7 Responsibility for the supply of unlicensed medicines (2)   229
The midnight telephone call from the neonatal ward
8 The NHS contract, responsibilities of the superintendent   237
The blizzard in the Yorkshire Dales
9 Duty to protect the public, even from pharmacists   243
The locum and the bottle of whisky
10 Duty to protect the public, even from pharmacists (2)   249
The European locum and the hospital staff
11 Duty to protect the public, even from other health professionals   259
The contraindication and the confident practice nurse
12 Accountabilities of an employee; duties of a superintendent   267
The non-pharmacist manager and the sales of codeine linctus
13 A matter of confidentiality   275
The suicide and his girlfriend
14 A matter of confidentiality (2)   281
The friend in hospital and her anxious mother
15 Private beliefs and patients' needs   287
The adolescent girl and the Levonelle
References   293
Further reading   294

General bibliography   295
Appendix: The RPSGB Code of Ethics   299
Index   307