Refounding Democratic Public Administration

Modern Paradoxes, Postmodern Challenges

Edited by
Gary L. Wamsley
James F. Wolf
Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Preface x

Introduction: Can a High-Modern Project Find Happiness in a Postmodern Era? 1

Gary L. Wamsley and James F. Wolf

1. On Governance and Reinventing Government 38

Richard T. Green and Lawrence Hubbell

2. Fencing in the Inherently Governmental Debate 68

Larkin Dudley

3. Public-Institutional Processes and Democratic Governance 92

Joy A. Clay

4. What a Difference a State Makes: Reflections on Governance in France 114

John A. Rohr

5. Moving Beyond Prescriptions: Making Sense of Public Administration Action Contexts 141

James F. Wolf
6. Administering in the Public Interest: The Facilitative Role for Public Administrators 168
   Thomas J. Barth

7. Postmodernism, Public Administration, and the Public Interest 198
   O. C. McSwite

8. The Public Administration and the Problem of the Presidency 225
   Larry M. Lane

9. Refusing to Get It Right: Citizenship, Difference, and the Refounding Project 260
   Camilla Stivers

10. Understanding Social Process: The Key to Democratic Governance 279
    Lisa Weinberg

11. The Maturation of Public Administration: The Search for a Democratic Identity 293
    Linda F. Dennard

12. Thinking Government: Bringing Democratic Awareness to Public Administration 327
    John H. Little

13. A Public Philosophy and Ontological Disclosure as the Basis for Normatively Grounded Theorizing in Public Administration 351
    Gary L. Wamsley

About the Contributors 402