Writing and America

Edited by
Gavin Cologne-Brookes,
Neil Sammells and David Timms

LONGMAN
London and New York
Contents

General Editors' Preface vii
Acknowledgements ix

Writing and America: an introduction 1
Gavin Cologne-Brookes

Part I 29

1 American constitutions and literary traditions 31
Christopher Mulvey

2 Writing out of Communism: recantation memoirs of the Cold War 52
David Seed

3 ‘A sense of the ludicrous’: women and humour in American literature 75
Regina Barreca

4 The two narratives of the Western 91
Antony Easthope

5 Narratives of the Native American 109
Robert Burchell

6 African American song in New Orleans: the voice of the people 135
Mary Ellison

7 Writing history: Frederick Jackson Turner and the deconstruction of American history 176
Alun Munslow
CONTENTS

8 Hawthorne, James and history
David Timms 195

9 Revisioning the American landscape: from Utopia to eco-critique
Renee Slater and Kate Fullbrook 216

10 William Carlos Williams and the reconstruction of America
Les Arnold 233

Part II Selected Documents 249

The Constitution of the United States, 1787 251

Preface to The Leather-Stocking Tales
by James Fenimore Cooper (1850) 260

‘Where I lived, and what I lived for’, from Walden, or life in the woods by H D Thoreau (1854) 264

‘Hawthorne’, from Hawthorne by Henry James (1879) 266

‘Basil Ransom’s New York’, from The Bostonians
by Henry James (1886) 269

‘The Significance of the Frontier in American History’
by Frederick Jackson Turner (1893) 271

‘Paterson’ by William Carlos Williams (1963) 279

‘Witness: the story of a middle-class family’
by Whittaker Chambers (1979) 281

‘Arctic dreams’, from The Country of the Mind
by Barry Lopez (1987) 289

Notes on contributors 292

Select Bibliography 295

Index 300