Writing and Victorianism

Edited by
J.B. Bullen

LONGMAN
London and New York
Contents

General Editors' Preface vii

Introduction 1
J.B. Bullen

1 Transition and tradition: the preoccupation with ancestry in Victorian writing 15
Sophie Gilmartin

2 The major silence: autobiographies of working women in the nineteenth century 38
Carol Jenkins

3 Writing, cultural production, and the periodical press in the nineteenth century 54
Laurel Brake

4 Engendering vision in the Victorian male poet 73
Catherine Maxwell

5 Victorian Lucretius: Tennyson and the problem of scientific romanticism 104
Patricia O’Neill

6 The opium-eater as criminal in Victorian writing 120
Julian North

7 Obscure recesses: locating the Victorian unconscious 137
Jenny Bourne Taylor

8 After the play: dreams of drama and death in the James family 180
Frances Wilson
CONTENTS

9 Visuality codes the text: Charles Dickens's Pictures from Italy
   Stephen Bann 202

10 John Ruskin and the Victorian landscape
   Phillip Mallett 219

11 A life in writing: Ruskin and the uses of suburbia
   Dinah Birch 234

12 Figuring the body in the Victorian novel
   J.B. Bullen 250

13 The Victorian novel as a self-conscious allusion
   Bernard Richards 266

14 Plotting the Victorians: narrative, post-modernism, and contemporary fiction
   Kate Flint 286

15 Oscar Wilde at centuries' end
   Neil Sammells 306

Notes on contributors 328

Select bibliography 331

Index 336