Mapping: Ways of Representing the World

Daniel Dorling
Department of Geography, University of Bristol

and

David Fairbairn
Department of Geomatics, University of Newcastle upon Tyne
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Foreword</th>
<th>page vii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgements</td>
<td>viii</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Introduction
- Geography and mapping 1
- Maps as the subject of this book 3
- Further reading 4

Chapter 1 The history of cartography
- An introduction to early maps 6
- The human mind and the shape of the earth: reconciling interpretation and reality 7
- The relationship of mapping to other human activities 8
- The Islamic tradition in map-making 21
- Summary 23
- Further reading 24

Contemporary mapping box Methods of studying the history of cartography 7

Personality box Ptolemy and the scientific nature of Greek cartography 11

Chapter 2 The shape and content of maps
- Maps and their scale 25
- The graticule 25
- Map projections 28
- Larger-scale mapping 35
- Generalization 38
- Summary 42
- Further reading 42

Contemporary mapping box The map icon in entertainment, communication and advertising 26

Personality box The ‘Peters Projection’ and its instigator 36

Chapter 3 Navigation, maps and accuracy
- Introduction 44
- Positioning 44
Contents

Navigation 45
Accuracy 53
Summary 63
Further reading 64
Contemporary mapping box GPS and positioning 49
Personality box Mercator and his world-view 52
Contemporary mapping box ECDIS 55
Contemporary mapping box In-car navigation 57
Contemporary mapping box Digital data in the cockpit 59

Chapter 4 Representing others 65
Introduction 65
Who are maps made for? 66
Map compilation 71
Interpreting the interpreters 75
An infinity of images 77
Summary 78
Further reading 81
Contemporary mapping box American Indians and geographical information systems 70
Personality box Brian Harley: taking mapping apart 74
Contemporary mapping box Cartography and the Internet 79

Chapter 5 Mapping territory 82
Introduction 82
Land ownership and mapping 82
Colonization and the subdivision of the earth 88
The impact of the military on mapping activity 90
Contemporary government mapping 95
Summary 99
Further reading 100
Contemporary mapping box Settling the USA: the Public Land Survey System 87
Contemporary mapping box Mapping the Gulf War 91
Contemporary mapping box The NIMA inventory of digital spatial data 96
Personality box William Roy and the Ordnance Survey 97

Chapter 6 New scales, new viewpoints 102
Introduction 102
The new world-view: an alternative icon 103
Remote sensing and data 104
Scale and accuracy beyond belief 106
Old and new views 109
Fractals: scale-free mapping 114
Further reading 119
Contemporary mapping box Pictures from space: the military and mapping 107
Contents

Contemporary mapping box Mapping time travel 110

Personality box Eduard Imhof and terrain mapping 112

Contemporary mapping box The three- and four-dimensional mapping of disease 115

Chapter 7 Geographical information systems 121

Introduction 121

A short history of geographical information systems 121

The democratization of map-making: removing the mystique 125

The applications of GIS and their effect on our image of the world 131

A critique of the GIS view of the world 134

Further reading 135

Personality box Jack Dangermond and the radical view of the world of GIS 122

Contemporary mapping box Earliest geographical information systems 124

Contemporary mapping box Ways of owning the world 127

Contemporary mapping box GIS and jobs 128

Chapter 8 Alternative views 137

Introduction 137

Map propaganda 137

Ecomapping 139

Humanist cartography 142

The 'new' world atlases 146

The cartography of war 150

Summary 154

Further reading 155

Personality box Doug Aberley: map-maker and bioregionalist 141

Personality box Janos Szegö and human cartography 145

Contemporary mapping box Cartograms: changing the shape of the world 147

Personality box Michael Kidron and the Pluto Press Project 150

Chapter 9 Representing the future and the future of representation 156

Introduction 156

New tools and new data 157

New roles and new maps 159

Changing perspectives on cartographic practice 161

Map-makers of the future 165

The parameters of map production 169

Further reading 172

Personality box Barbara Bartz Petchenik 166

References 173

Index 178