Contents

Editor's Note vii

Introduction 1

Harold Bloom

Jamaica Kincaid and the Resistance to Canons. 3

Giovanna Covi

Family Connections: Mother and Mother Country in the Fiction of Jean Rhys and Jamaica Kincaid. 13

Laura Niesen de Abruna

She Ties Her Tongue: The Problems of Cultural Paralysis in Postcolonial Criticism. 37

Alison Donnell

Lucy and the Mark of the Colonizer. 51

Moira Ferguson

Jamaica Kincaid: “First They Must Be Children.” 71

Patricia Ismond

Compared to What? Global Feminism, Comparatism, and the Master’s Tools. 79

Susan Sniader Lanser

Severing the (M)Other Connection: The Representation of Cultural Identity in Jamaica Kincaid’s Annie John. 97

H. Adlai Murdoch
Jamaica Kincaid's Lucy: Cultural "Translation" as a Case of Creative Exploration of the Past. 117
   Edyta Oczkowicz

Initiation in Jamaica Kincaid's Annie John. 131
   Donna Perry

Cold Hearts and (Foreign) Tongues: Recitation and the Reclamation of the Female Body in the Works of Erna Brodber and Jamaica Kincaid. 141
   Helen Tiffin

Adolescent Rebellion and Gender Relations in At the Bottom of the River and Annie John. 157
   Helen Pyne Timothy

Chronology 169

Contributors 173

Bibliography 177

Acknowledgments 179

Index 181