Contents

Introduction: The Transport of the Novel  Deidre Lynch and William B. Warner  i
Prologue: Why the Story of the Origin of the (English) Novel Is an American Romance (If Not the Great American Novel) Homer Brown  ii

I  The Contact Zone  45
1  Between England and America: Captivity, Sympathy, and the Sentimental Novel  Michelle Burnham  47
2  The Maori House of Fiction  Bridget Orr  73
3  Decolonization, Displacement, Disidentification: Asian American “Novels” and the Question of History  Lisa Lowe  96
4  The Rise of Gabriel García Márquez and Toni Morrison  Dane Johnson  129

II  (Trans)National Canons  157
5  At Home with Jane Austen  Deidre Lynch  159
6  The Abbotsford Guide to India: Romantic Fictions of Empire and the Narratives of Canadian Literature  Katie Trumpener  193
7  Writing Out Asia: Modernity, Canon, and Natsume Sōseki’s Kokoro  James A. Fujii  222
8  The Joys of Daughterhood: Gender, Nationalism, and the Making of Literary Tradition(s)  Susan Z. Andrade  249
III  The Romance of Consumption  277

9  Formulating Fiction: Romancing the General Reader in Early Modern Britain  William B. Warner  279
10 “To Love a Murderer”—Fantasy, Sexuality, and the Political Novel: The Case of Caleb Williams  Dorothea von Mücke  306
11 The Limits of Reformism: The Novel, Censorship, and the Politics of Adultery in Nineteenth-Century France  Jann Matlock  335
12 Romances for “Big and Little Boys”: The U.S. Romantic Revival of the 1890s and James’s The Turn of the Screw  Nancy Glazener  369
13 Pax Americana: The Case of Show Boat  Lauren Berlant  399

Epilogue: The Rise of Novelism  Clifford Siskin  423

Works Cited  441
Index  477
Contributors  487