1. SHORT PROSE AND THE MINI-ESSAY 1
Short works use concise style and straightforward vocabulary to approach some of life's complexities.

Jan Wiener, The Last Game 3
In Focus: Literacies 5

Michelle Genz, Getting Pucked 8
In Focus: Subject and Theme 10

Leonard Pitts Jr., Too Many Youths Turn Life's "Speed Bumps" into Unscalable Peaks 12
In Focus: Thesis 14

Ana Veciana-Suarez, For Women Only 16

Robb Walsh, Phantom Church of Cluny 19
In Focus: Purpose 21

Marcus Bleecker, My Father's Black Pride 23
In Focus: Personal and Academic Writing 25

Robert Fulghum, from All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten 28
In Focus: Point of View 30
Carl Sandburg, A Fence and Onion Days 32

Molly Ivins, Get a Knife, Get a Dog, but Get Rid of Guns 35
  In Focus: Speaking Your Mind 36

Rafe Martin, Zen Failure 39
  In Focus: Speaking from the Center 43

Maya Angelou, from The Heart of a Woman 45

Five Very Short Sketches—Watching TV 49
  In Focus: Brief Narratives 52

2. Clarity, Economy, and Style 55

More short pieces: language becomes more challenging and sentences take on increasingly complex rhythms.

Andrea Lee, Back to School 58
  In Focus: Defining from Context 59

  In Focus: Denotation and Connotation 64

Robert Frost, Mending Wall 66

Abraham Lincoln, Address at the Dedication of Gettysburg Cemetery as a War Memorial 69
  In Focus: Diction 69

Aurora Levins Morales, Kitchens 71
  In Focus: Revision 72

Anatole Broyard, from Intoxicated by My Illness 75
  In Focus: Journals 78

William Faulkner, Nobel Prize Award Speech 81
  In Focus: Audience 82

Langston Hughes, The Animals Must Wonder 85
  In Focus: Tone 87

David James Duncan, A Streetlamp in the Netherlands 89
William Bryant Logan, Clyde's Pick-Up 92
   In Focus: Descriptive Detail 94

Barry Lopez, from The Log Jam 96

William Maxwell, What He Was Like 99

Roger L. Welsch, Send in the Clown 103
   In Focus: The Writer's Stance 105

Ursula K. Le Guin, The Creatures on My Mind 107

Abigail Zuger, The Pain Game 112

---

3. Organizing Patterns 117
   Attention here focuses on rhetorical patterns and other useful approaches to organization.

David Quammen, The Face of a Spider 120
   In Focus: Vision and Structure 124

Margaret Mead and Rhoda Metraux, Time to Reflect, Time to Feel 127
   In Focus: A Simple, Basic Pattern for the Short Essay 131

Meg Laughlin, The Test 134

John Allen Paulos, More Dismal Math Scores for U.S. Students 139
   In Focus: Formal Outlines 143

Richard Selzer, from Raising the Dead 145
   In Focus: Narration 148

Ann H. Zwinger, from The Lake Rock 151
   In Focus: Description 153

Harold Klawans, The Mind of a Neurologist 156
   In Focus: Exposition 162

John Ruskin, from Fors Clavigera 165
   In Focus: Classification 167
bell hooks, Representing the Poor 170
In Focus: Argument 176

Jenny Lyn Bader, Larger than Life 179
In Focus: Definition 189

Mohammad Yunus, Grameen Bank 191
In Focus: Process 197

Andrei Codrescu, Pizza Woes 200
In Focus: Comparison/Contrast 201

Esmeralda Santiago, from The American Invasion of Macún 203

Robert D. Richardson Jr., Prologue to Emerson: The Mind on Fire 209
In Focus: Cause and Effect 211

Stephen King, Why We Crave Horror Movies 214

Melvin Konner, Why the Reckless Survive 218
In Focus: Coherence 228

4. Critical Thought 231

Longer selections offer expanded vocabulary and illustrate methods of argument and exposition.

David Ehrenfeld, Adaptation 234
In Focus: Critical Analysis 237

Umberto Eco, How to Speak of Animals 240
In Focus: Pause and Consider 241

Lani Guinier, The Tyranny of the Majority 244

Jeremy Iggers, Innocence Lost: Our Complicated Relationship with Food 251
In Focus: Identifying and Defining the Problem 255

Harry Stein, Ah, Sweet Vengeance! 257
In Focus: Concrete Details and Abstract Thought 261
David C. Anderson, The Crime Funnel  263
In Focus: Statistical Evidence  267

Gina Kolata, Should Children Be Told If Genes Predict Illness?  270
In Focus: Citing Authorities  274

Anna Quindlen, The Great White Myth  276
In Focus: Emotional Appeal  278

Michael Nelson, Politics as a Vital, and Sometimes Noble, Human Activity  279
In Focus: Cause and Effect in a Persuasive Essay  283

Marty Klein, Erotophobia: The Cruelest Abuse of All  285

Otetiani, “Friend and Brother . . .”  291
In Focus: Classical Argument  292

Jonathan Swift, A Modest Proposal  295
In Focus: Satire  302

Barbara Ehrenreich, Kiss Me, I'm Gay  304
In Focus: Inductive and Deductive Reasoning  306

Pattiann Rogers, Animals and People: “The Human Heart in Conflict with Itself”  309

5. FROM EXPERIENCE TO ISSUES  315
Extended personal essays move from individual experience to broader significance.

Richard Wolkomir, Making Up for Lost Time: The Rewards of Reading at Last  317
In Focus: The Reader in the Process  327

Barbara Kingsolver, Stone Soup  329
In Focus: How to Measure Your Reading Speed  336

George Orwell, Shooting an Elephant  338
In Focus: From the Self to Society  344
Leonard Kriegel, Claiming the Self: The Cripple as American Man 346
In Focus: The Virtual World of Literature 353

E. B. White, Once More to the Lake 355
In Focus: The Appeal to the Senses 360

Judith Ortiz Cofer, The Looking-Glass Shame 363
In Focus: Opening with a Quotation 371

James Baldwin, from Notes of a Native Son 373
In Focus: Opening with an Anecdote 381

Kathleen Norris, Where I Am 383
In Focus: A Sense of Place 394

6. Textual Challenges 397
Increasing length and difficulty provide exercises in developing intellect and focus.

Jan Hoffman, Judge Hayden’s Family Values 399
In Focus: Active Reading 416

Barbara Tuchman, An Inquiry into the Persistence of Unwisdom in Government 419

Dennis Alan Mann, Beams of Light: Looking at Architecture 432
In Focus: The Research Paper 441

Jonathan Marks, Black White Other 443
In Focus: Texture 449

Dylan Thomas, The Force That Through the Green Fuse Drives the Flower 451

Stephen Hawking, Is Everything Determined? 453
In Focus: Science and Philosophy 461

Jamaica Kincaid, from A Small Place 463
In Focus: Irony 470
7. ELOQUENCE AND EXPERTISE 491
In style, vocabulary, and content, these complex and rewarding models of fine prose challenge the best of readers.

Sven Birkerts, From the Window of a Train 493
In Focus: The Responsive Reader 497

Annie Dillard, Total Eclipse 500

Cynthia Ozick, Of Christian Heroism 513
In Focus: Literary Language 521

Henry David Thoreau, from Walden—Conclusion 523
In Focus: Allusion 532

Richard Rodriguez, Mixed Blood: Columbus’s Legacy. A World Made Mestizo 535
In Focus: Modernist Nonfiction 550

Henry Louis Gates Jr., A Dangerous Literacy: The Legacy of Frederick Douglass 552

Authors 561
Permissions Acknowledgments 583
Index 591