Monika Fludernik (ed.)

Hybridity and Postcolonialism

Twentieth-Century Indian Literature

Stauffenburg Verlag
Table of contents

Monika Fludernik (Freiburg)
Introduction ................................................................................ 9

Monika Fludernik (Freiburg)

Walter Göbel (Saarbrücken)
Beyond Hybridity? Chaos as a Literary Stereotype in Novels of India, and Chaos on the Rebound ............................ 55

Gerhard Stilz (Tübingen)
‘Truth? Hell, you will get contrast, and no mistake!’
Sanitizing the intercultural polylemma in G.V. Desani’s
All About H. Hattett (1948/72) .................................................... 79

Samir Dayal (Waltham, Massachusetts)
The Emergence of the Fragile Subject:
Amitav Ghosh’s In an Antique Land .............................................. 103

Martina Ghosh-Schellhorn (Essen / Halle-Wittenberg)
Truth Tales of Gendered Transitional Identities:
Indian Women’s Short Stories ........................................................ 135

Birgit Krückels (Freiburg)
‘Men Live in Homes, Women Live in Bodies’:
Body and Gender in Sara Suleri’s Meatless Days ......................... 167
Anja Oed (Freiburg)
Aspects of (Self-)Representation in Sara Suleri's Meatless Days, or: what does it mean, to write a book beyond what it is about? 187

Feroza Jussawalla (El Paso, Texas)
‘Hybridity,’ Our Ancestral Heritage: Minority ‘Indian’ Writers Speak of their Diversity 199

Sangeeta Ray (College Park, Maryland)
The Nation in Performance: Bhabha, Mukherjee and Kureishi 219

Sabine Schulting (Erfurt)
Peeling off History in Salman Rushdie’s The Moor’s Last Sigh 239

Monika Fludernik (Freiburg)

Bio-Bibliographical Abstracts 291