ROMANTICISM AND COLONIALISM

Writing and Empire, 1780–1830

EDITED BY TIM FULFORD
AND
PETER J. KITSON

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
Contents

Notes on contributors page vii

Acknowledgements xi

1 Romanticism and colonialism: texts, contexts, issues 1
Tim Fulford and Peter J. Kitson

2 Romanticism and colonialism: races, places, peoples, 1785–1800 13
Peter J. Kitson

3 Romanticism and colonialism: races, places, peoples, 1800–1830 35
Tim Fulford

4 Accessing India: Orientalism, anti-'Indianism' and the rhetoric of Jones and Burke 48
Michael J. Franklin

5 'Sunshine and Shady Groves': what Blake's 'Little Black Boy' learned from African writers 67
Lauren Henry

6 Blood Sugar 87
Timothy Morton

7 'Wisely forgetful': Coleridge and the politics of Pantisocracy 107
James C. McKusick

8 Darkness visible? Race and representation in Bristol abolitionist poetry, 1770–1810 129
Alan Richardson
9 Fictional constructions of Liberated Africans: Mary Butt Sherwood 148

Moira Ferguson

10 'Wandering through Eblis'; absorption and containment in Romantic exoticism 165

Nigel Leask

11 The Isle of Devils: The Jamaican journal of M. G. Lewis 189

D. L. Macdonald

12 Indian Jugglers: Hazlitt, Romantic Orientalism, and the difference of view 206

John Whale

13 'Some samples of the finest Orientalism': Byronic Philhellenism and proto-Zionism at the time of the Congress of Vienna 221

Caroline Franklin

14 ‘Once did she hold the gorgeous East in fee . . .’: Byron’s Venice and Oriental Empire 243

Malcolm Kelsall

15 The plague of imperial desire: Montesquieu, Gibbon, Brougham, and Mary Shelley’s The Last Man 261

Joseph W. Lew

Index 279