Religion and the Antebellum Debate over Slavery

Edited by John R. McKivigan & Mitchell Snay

The University of Georgia Press • Athens and London
CONTENTS

1 Introduction: Religion and the Problem of Slavery in Antebellum America • John R. McKivigan and Mitchell Snay

ONE Religion and the Origins of the Slavery Debate

35 Of Stations and Relations: Proslavery Christianity in Early National Virginia • Douglas Ambrose

68 Slavery and the Evangelical Enlightenment • Robert P. Forbes

TWO Conflict within the Ranks

109 “To Keep the Way Open for Methodism”: Georgia Wesleyan Neutrality toward Slavery, 1844–1861 • Christopher H. Owen

134 “Matters of Justice between Man and Man”: Northern Divines, the Bible, and the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850 • Laura L. Mitchell

THREE The Center Does Not Hold: Individuals, Institutions, and Slavery

169 Evangelical Womanhood and the Politics of the African Colonization Movement in Virginia • Elizabeth R. Varon

196 Suffering with Slaveholders: The Limits of Francis Wayland’s Antislavery Witness • Deborah Bingham Van Broekhoven

221 Leonard Bacon, the Congregational Church, and Slavery, 1845–1861 • Hugh Davis

FOUR Breaking Bonds: The Denominational Schisms

249 Evangelicals Divided: Abolition and the Plan of Union’s Demise in Ohio’s Western Reserve • Chris Padgett

273 “To Rend the Body of Christ”: Proslavery Ideology and Religious Schism from a Mississippi Perspective • Randy J. Sparks
296  The Restructuring of Southern Religion: Slavery, Denominations, and the Clerical Profession in Virginia · Beth Barton Schweiger

317  “Religion Has Something... to Do with Politics”: Southern Evangelicals and the North, 1845–1860 · Edward R. Crowther

343  The Sectional Division of the Methodist and Baptist Denominations as Measures of Northern Antislavery Sentiment · John R. McKivigan

365  Contributors

367  Index