THE FUTURE
OF AUSTRALIAN
MULTICULTURALISM

Reflections on the Twentieth Anniversary of Jean Martin's The Migrant Presence

edited by Ghassan Hage
and Rowanne Couch

Research Institute for Humanities and Social Sciences,
University of Sydney, 1999
CONTENTS

Preface ........................................................................................................... v

Introduction
  Ghassan Hage. ......................................................................................... vii

Part I: Debating the Migrant Presence
Towards a Robust Pluralism: Jean Martin’s spirit of inquiry
  Gillian Bottomley ..................................................................................... 3

Playing with Words
  Angela Chan ............................................................................................. 9

The Sources and Limits of Popular Support for a Multicultural Australia
  Frank Jones .............................................................................................. 22

Globalisation, Multicultural Citizenship and Transnational Democracy
  Stephen Castles ....................................................................................... 31

Part II: The Migrant Condition
Middle Class Migration: new considerations in research and policy
  Christine Inglis ...................................................................................... 45

English is Broken Here: migrant workers and the trade union movement
  Vaska Dervisovski .................................................................................. 65

A Precarious Future: Migrants and Structural Change
  Santina Bertone ...................................................................................... 73

Walls of Silence
  David Dixon and Lisa Maher .................................................................. 89

Muslim Women and the Police
  Maha Abdo ........................................................................................... 103

Part III: Multicultural Politics
An Analysis of Multiculturalism in Australia from an NGO Women’s Perspective
  Raquel Carvajal ....................................................................................... 109

How Powerful is the Ethnic Lobby?
  James Jupp ............................................................................................ 123

Multicultural Politics and Resistance: Migrants Unite?
  Ellie Vasta ............................................................................................ 133
Part IV: The Problematic of Whiteness

What is This Thing Called White? Reflections on ‘whiteness’ and multiculturalism.
Jan Larbalestier

Multiculturalism and the Whitening Machine, or How Australians Become White
Jon Stratton

Racial/Spatial Anxiety: ‘Asia’ in the psycho-geography of Australian whiteness
Ien Ang

Pauline Hanson and the Power of the Media
Murray Goot

Part V: Multicultural Routes

Enter: A Vagrant Land
Ben Saul

Migrants, Citizenship and the New Civics
Alistair Davidson

Genealogies of ‘The Woman Question’: the colonial past in multiculturalism’s ‘present’
Kalpana Ram

Ethnicity and its ‘Others’: a contribution
Daryl Melham

An Uneasy Conversation: multicultural and indigenous discourses
Ann Curthoys

Contributors

Tables

Table 1: Main Differences Between Australian Nativists and Civic Pluralists .......... 24
Table 2: Levels of Support for a Multicultural Australia in the Mid-1990s .......... 24
Table 3: Levels of Support for Multiculturalism in Australia, Canada, Great Britain and the USA in the Mid-1990s ........................................ 25
Table 4: Levels of Support for Immigration in Australia in the Mid-1990s .......... 27
Table 5: Levels of Support for Immigration in Australia, Canada, Great Britain and the USA in the Mid-1990s .......... 27