Decentring the Renaissance

Canada and Europe in Multidisciplinary Perspective, 1500–1700

EDITED BY
Germaine Warkentin
Carolyn Podruchny

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESS
Toronto Buffalo London
Contents

Illustrations ix

Preface xi

Introduction: ‘Other Land Existing’ 3
Germaine Warkentin and Carolyn Podruchny

Part I: Methods

Natalie Zemon Davis

Inclusive and Exclusive Perceptions of Difference: Native and Euro-Based Concepts of Time, History, and Change 33
Deborah Doxtator

Plunder or Harmony? On Merging European and Native Views of Early Contact 48
Toby Morantz

Memoria as the Place of Fabrication of the New World 68
Gilles Thérien

Part II: Mentalités / Debwewin

The Sixteenth-Century French Vision of Empire: The Other Side of Self-Determination 87
Olive Patricia Dickason
The Mentality of the Men behind Sixteenth-Century Spanish Voyages to Terranova 110
Selma Huxley Barkham

Relocating Terra Firma: William Vaughan's Newfoundland 125
Anne Lake Prescott

Images of English Origins in Newfoundland and Roanoke 141
Mary C. Fuller

From the Good Savage to the Degenerate Indian: The Amerindian in the Accounts of Travel to America 159
Réal Ouellet with Mylene Tremblay

Part III: Translatio fide

Few, Uncooperative, and Ill Informed? The Roman Catholic Clergy in French and British North America, 1610–1658 173
Luca Codignola

Canada in Seventeenth-Century Jesuit Thought: Backwater or Opportunity? 186
Peter A. Goddard

André Sanfaçon

Part IV: Decentring at Work

The Delights of Nature in This New World: A Seventeenth-Century Canadian View of the Environment 223
Lynn Berry

The Beginning of French Exploration out of the St Lawrence Valley: Motives, Methods, and Changing Attitudes towards Native People 236
Conrad E. Heidenreich

The Earliest European Encounters with Iroquoian Languages 252
Wallace Chafe

Decentring Icons of History: Exploring the Archaeology of the Frobisher Voyages and Early European–Inuit Contact 262
Réginald Auger, William W. Fitzhugh, Lynda Gullason, Anne Henshaw, Donald Hogarth, and Dosia Laeyendecker