RESTRUCTURING AND RESISTANCE
Canadian Public Policy in an Age of Global Capitalism

edited by Mike Burke, Colin Mooers and John Shields

Fernwood Publishing • Halifax, Nova Scotia
CONTENTS

Acknowledgements ........................................................................................................ 8
Contributors .................................................................................................................. 9

Introduction: Critical Perspectives on Canadian Public Policy ...................... 11
Mike Burke, Colin Mooers and John Shields

Part One: Globalization, the State and Shifting Terrains ......................... 25

Chapter 1
From the Workhouse to Workfare:
   The Welfare State and Shifting Policy Terrains
Bob Russell .............................................................................................................. 26

Chapter 2
The Policy Influence of Economic Ideas:
   Interests, Institutions and Innovation in Canada
Neil Bradford ........................................................................................................... 50

Chapter 3
Globalization and the Challenge to Canadian Democracy:
   National Governance Under Threat
B. Mitchell Evans, Stephen McBride and John Shields ........................................ 80

Chapter 4
Tracking Inequality in the New Canadian Labour Market
Mike Burke and John Shields ................................................................................... 98

Chapter 5
Federalism, Globalization and the (Anti-)Social Union
Gregory J. Inwood .................................................................................................. 124

Part Two: Neoliberal Restructuring of Public Policy ................................. 145

Chapter 6
Education for a Lean World
Alan Sears ............................................................................................................... 146

Chapter 7
Policy from What? Neoliberal and Human-Capital Theoretical
   Foundations of Recent Canadian Labour-Market Policy
Stephen McBride ..................................................................................................... 159
Chapter 8
Efficiency and the Erosion of Health Care in Canada
Mike Burke ................................................................. 178

Chapter 9
Out of Sync with a “Shrinking State”?
Janet M. Lum and A. Paul Williams .............................................. 194

Chapter 10
Communication Policy in a Global Age:
    Regulation, Public Communication and the Post-National Project
David Hogarth ........................................................................... 212

Chapter 11
When Right Is Wrong: Municipal Governance and Downloading in Toronto
Neil Thomlinson ......................................................................... 226

Part Three: Restructuring and Resistance: Theory and Practice

Chapter 12
Globalization, Trade Pacts and Migrant Workers:
    Rethinking the Politics of Working-Class Resistance
David McNally ........................................................................... 262

Chapter 13
Beyond the Welfare State? Left Feminism and Global Capitalist Restructuring
Susan Ferguson ........................................................................... 276

Chapter 14
Containing Resistance: The Neoliberal Boundaries of Employment Equity
Anver Saloojee ........................................................................... 237

Chapter 15
Assessing Resistance in Harris’s Ontario, 1995–1999
David Camfield ........................................................................... 306

Chapter 16
Beyond Left and Right? The Self-Limiting Politics of the “Third Way”
Colin Mooers ........................................................................... 318

Bibliography .................................................................................... 338
Index .................................................................................................. 375