Text Types and Corpora

Studies in Honour of Udo Fries

defined by
Andreas Fischer, Gunnel Tottie and Hans Martin Lehmann

with the assistance of Therese Lutz and Peter Schneider

Gunter Narr Verlag Tübingen
Table of Contents

Acknowledgments vii
Introduction viii
Tabula gratulatoria xiii
List of Udo Fries’s publications xv

Text types

Genre vs. text type: Two typologies and their uses for the newspaper reader 1
Hans-Jürgen Diller

What’s in a name? Terms designating text types and the history of English 17
Manfred Görlach

Hypertextlinguistics: Textuality and typology of hypertext 29
Andreas H. Jucker

Deictic anchoring in Early Modern English court trials 53
Barbara Kryk-Kastovsky & Dieter Kastovsky

Non-serious text types and German death notices – an unlikely pair 59
Leonhard Lipka

English newsletters in the 17th century 67
Terttu Nevalainen

Textual morphology from Gutenberg to the e-book 77
Pam Peters

When news stories are no longer just stories: The emergence of the top-down structure in news reports in English newspapers 91
Friedrich Ungerer

English in Swiss job adverts: A Bourdieuan perspective 105
Richard J. Watts
Corpora

Relative whom: “a mischief-maker”
Flor Aarts & Bas Aarts

Sampling and categorizing fronted constructions in the BNC
Jürgen Esser

The dramatick disappearance of the `<ick>` spelling, researched with authentick material from the Zurich English Newspaper Corpus
Andreas Fischer & Peter Schneider

Absolutely diabolical or relatively straightforward? Modification of adjectives by degree adverbs in the British National Corpus
Graeme Kennedy

Towards a history of English directives
Thomas Kohnen

Tagged corpora as a new resource in the study of linguistic change in progress: Nominal and verbal styles in English
Christian Mair

Despite or notwithstanding? On the development of concessive prepositions in English
Matti Rissanen

Tall as he was or As tall as he was? Concessive constructions in American English
Gunnel Tottie

Notes on contributors and editors

Addresses of contributors and editors