Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction ix

1. The Current State of Scholarship on Southern Women Playwrights i
   Robert L. McDonald

2. “Let the People Sing!”: Zora Neale Hurston and the Dream of a Negro Theater 11
   John Lowe

3. These Four: Hellman’s Roots Are Showing 27
   Theresa R. Mooney

4. Carson McCullers, Lillian Smith, and the Politics of Broadway 42
   Judith Giblin James

5. The Delayed Entrance of Lily Mae Jenkins: Queer Identity, Gender Ambiguity, and Southern Ambivalence in Carson McCullers’s The Member of the Wedding 61
   Betty E. McKinnie and Carlos L. Dews

6. “Controversy Only Means Disagreement”: Alice Childress’s Activist Drama 73
   Donna Lisker

7. Role-ing on the River: Actors Theatre of Louisville and the Southern Woman Playwright 89
   Elizabeth S. Bell
8. Precursor and Protegé: Lillian Hellman and Marsha Norman 103
   Sally Burke

9. “Un-ruling” the Woman: Comedy and the Plays of Beth Henley and Rebecca Gilman 124
   Janet L. Gupton

10. Pseudonymy and Identity Politics: Exploring “Jane Martin” 139
    J. Ellen Gainor

11. Dialectic and the Drama of Naomi Wallace 154
    Claudia Barnett

12. Amparo Garcia and the Eyes of Tejas: Texas Community through Mexicana Eyes 169
    Carolyn Roark

13. Reconfiguring History: Migration, Memory, and (Re)Membering in Suzan-Lori Parks’s Plays 183
    Elizabeth Brown-Guillory

14. The Memory Palace in Paula Vogel’s Plays 198
    Alan Shepard and Mary Lamb

15. Postmodern Monologues in Regina Porter’s Tripping through the Car House 218
    Mary Resing

16. Southern Women Playwrights and the Atlanta Hub: Home Is the Place Where You Go 230
    Linda Rohrer Paige

Contributors 247

Index 251