The Undiscovered Country
The Later Plays of Tennessee Williams

EDITED BY
Philip C. Kolin
CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1
  Philip C. Kolin

“The Inexpressible Regret of All Her Regrets”: Tennessee Williams’s Later Plays as Artaudian Theatre of Cruelty 5
  Annette J. Saddik

The Day on Which a Woman Dies: The Milk Train Doesn’t Stop Here Anymore and Nō Theatre 25
  Michael Paller

The Gnädiges Fräulein: Tennessee Williams’s Clown Show 40
  Allean Hale

“AWK!!” Extremity, Animality, and the Aesthetic of Awkwardness in Tennessee Williams’s The Gnädiges Fräulein 54
  Una Chaudhuri

Tennessee Williams’s Forgotten Film: The Last of the Mobile Hot-Shots as a Screen Version of The Seven Descents of Myrtle 68
  Gene D. Phillips, S.J.

Ut Pictura Poesis, Ut Poesis Pictura: The Painterly Texture of Tennessee Williams’s In the Bar of a Tokyo Hotel 80
  Terri Smith Ruckel

The Two-Character Out Cry and Break Out 93
  Felicia Hardison Londré
“having lost the ability to say: ‘My God!’”: The Theology of Tennessee Williams’s Small Craft Warnings
   Philip C. Kolfin

The Gnostic Politics of The Red Devil Battery Sign
   Robert F. Gross

Vieux Carré: Transferring “A Story of Mood”
   Robert Bray

Waiting for Buddy, or Just Going on in A Lovely Sunday for Creve Coeur
   Verna Foster

“I Can’t Imagine Tomorrow”: Tennessee Williams and the Representations of Time in Clothes for a Summer Hotel
   George W. Crandell

“Let’s Face the Music and Dance”: Resurgent Romanticism in Tennessee Williams’s Camino Real and Clothes for a Summer Hotel
   Norma Jenckes

“In My Leftover Heart”: Confessional Autobiography in Tennessee Williams’s Something Cloudy, Something Clear
   James Fisher

A House Not Meant to Stand—Tennessee’s Haunted Last Laugh
   Thomas Keith

Notes on Contributors