INDIA AND COMMUNISM

SECRET BRITISH DOCUMENTS

EDITED BY ASHOKE KUMAR MUKHOPADHYAY

NATIONAL BOOK AGENCY PVT. LTD.
CONTENTS

Glossary
Editor's note
Preface

PART ONE Introductory

CHAPTER 1.
THE PURPOSE OF THE PRESENT WORK.
A Wrong Diagnosis - 1; The Method of this Book - 1; What Communism Means - 1; Russian Methods - 2; Its Application to India - 3; Communist Training Schools - 4; Russian Methods in India - 4; A Concrete Example - 5; The Role of the Soviet Trader - 5; The Amtorg Trading Corporation - 6; Soviet Flag Follows Soviet Trade - 7

CHAPTER 2
THE LESSONS OF THE CHINESE REVOLUTION
China, a Base for Operation in India - 9; Communist Penetration - 9; Some Fallacies - 10; Communist China - A Danger to India - 10; Present Operations in Central China - 11; Indigenous Communism - 11; The Central Soviet Government - 12; Local Adaptations - 12; Early Methods - 13; Apostles of Communism - 14; Application to India - 14

CHAPTER 3
A PRELIMINARY APPRECIATION
Sir David Petrie's Book - 16; A Comparison of Symptoms Then and Now - 16; The Danger of Success - 17
PART TWO
India's Neighbours

CHAPTER 4
PERSIA

Agabekov's Revelations - 23; Communist Activity - 23; Present Methods - 24; Communist Agents at Work - 24; Anti-British Propaganda - 25; Indians in Persia - 25; Some Specific Cases - 26

CHAPTER 5
AFGHANISTAN

Early Bolshevik Plans - 28; Penetration of Afghanistan - 28; Soviet Elation - 29; India the Objective - 29 A Change of Policy - 30; The Accession of Nadir Shah - 31; Leonide N. Stark - 31; Propaganda in Favour of Amanullah - 31; Attempts at Penetration - 32; Other Methods - 33; The Continuance of Indian Sedition - 33; Mitha Singh - 34; Gurmukh Singh and Rattan Singh - 35; Rattan Singh's Reappearance - 35; Discussions in Moscow - 36; Operations in Kabul - 36; A Projected Rising - 36; A More Concrete Proposal - 37; The Communist Motif - 38; Rattan Singh's Letter - 38; Afghan Intervention - 39; The Future - 39

CHAPTER 6
SINKIANG AND TIBET

Soviet Designs in Central Asia - 41; The First Step Towards Soviet Domination - 42; India the Objective - 42; Relations with Nanking - 42; The Genesis of the Recent Rebellion - 43; Russian Aid to the Rebels - 44; Russian Aid to the Chinese - 44; "The Independent Islamic Republic of Eastern Turkistan" - 45; The Tungan Conquest of the South - 46; Soviet Interference - 46; The Price of Russian Assistance - 47; The Campaign Against Britain - 48; Conclusions - 49; Communist Designs on Tibet - 50; Customary Propaganda - 50; Tibet's Future Alliances - 51
CHAPTER 7.
THE FAR EASTERN BUREAU, SHANGHAI
(52-56)
Direction from Shanghai – 52; Joseph Ducroux, the Trader – 52; The Functions of the F. E. B and the P. P. T. U. S. – 52; Conspiratorial Methods – 53; The Magnitude of the Efforts – 54; The Results Achieved – 54; A Future Programme – 54; A Recovery – 55

CHAPTER 8.
WESTERN CHINA AND BURMA
Early Attentions from Moscow – 57; Misrepresentation of British Intentions – 57; Some Results of Propaganda – 58; Yunnan, a Base for Attacks on India – 58; A Set-back to Communism – 59; Burma – 59; Chinese Communists in Rangoon – 59; The "Burma Committee" – 60; Tuan Tsong Kwai – 60; Plans for the Future – 61; A Second Line of Attack – 61; Ṣaklatvala's Activities – 62; The Burmese Students' Union – 62; The Response in Burma – 62; The Dobama Society and the All-Burma Youths' League – 63; "Manifesto on the Burma Reforms" – 63; Activity Amongst Students – 64; Industrial Activities – 64; Volunteer Organisations – 65;

CHAPTER 9.
FRENCH INDO-CHINA AND SIAM
Early Nationalist Tendencies – 67; A Communist Complexion – 67; Nguyễn Ái Quóc – 67; Quóc's Work at Home – 68; Work Abroad – 68; The 1930 Rebellion – 69; Survival of the Party – 69; Open Letter from the Communist Party of China – 70; Relations with France – 70; Wider Implications – 71; Siam's Early Freedom from Taint – 71; Luang Pradit's "Communism" – 72; Attentions from Moscow – 72; Siam's Future – 73
CHAPTER 10.
THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS AND THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

The Advent of Communism –75; Subdivision of Duties –75; Joseph Ducroux, the Communist – 75; Re-establishment of Contact –76; Directions from Shanghai –77; Internal Reconstruction –77; An Emissary –78; Some Results of Propaganda –79; The Racial Movement –80; Possible Dangers –81

CHAPTER 11.
THE DUTCH EAST INDIES

Similarity of Conditions – 83; Sir David Petrie's Views on the 1926 disorders – 83; Method of Organising – 84; The Timing of the Outbreak – 84; The Survival of Communism – 85; Moscow's Nationalist Policy in Operation – 85; Mohamed Hatta’s Return–86; An Exposition of Official Policy – 87; The Foreign Bureau – 87; The Eastern Line of Attack – 88; The Response from Within – 89; Tan Malaka –8

PART THREE.
India's Own Troubles.
CHAPTER 12.
THE BIRTH OF INDIAN COMMUNISM

Some Early Communist Pronouncements – 93; Manabendra Nath Roy's Early History – 93; Roy as Moscow's Indian Adviser –94; The Foundations of Communism in India – 94; The Cawnpore Conspiracy Case and After – 95

CHAPTER 13.
THE PERIOD OF REGENERATION

An Estimate of Roy's Early Achievements; Doubts of Roy's Ability – 97; Changed Tactics – European Supervision – 97; Spratt, Bradley and Hutchinson – 98; Other Agents from abroad – 98; Indian Leadership – 99
CHAPTER 14.

THE APPROACH TO MEERUT

CHAPTER 15.

THE MEERUT CONSPIRACY CASE.

Preliminaries – 115; A Summary of the Charges – 115; The Sentences – 116; The Scope of the Conspiracy – 117; Outside Assistance – 117; Revision on Appeal – 118; The Duration of the Trial – 119; The Future – 121; The Indian Communist Programme – 121; Other Items in the Programme – 122; Violent Methods of Revolution – 123; Violence an Immediate Objective – 124 foreign direction and assistance.

CHAPTER 16.

The Conspiracy Abroad – 125; The Colonial Bureau of the C. P. G. B. – 125; Roy's Relations with the Colonial Bureau – 125; The Amsterdam Conference and After – 126; The Foreign Bureau 126 Methods of Transmission – 127; The Pondicherry-Madras Post Office – 128; Secret Writing 129 Financial Aid from Abroad – 129; Moscow, the Probable Source – 130; Some Remittances from London – 130; Donations from "Russian Works" – 131; Conclusions – 132
CHAPTER 17

THE PERIOD OF DEGENERATION

A Blow at Communism – 134; A Peaceful Year – 134; The Nagpur Congress and After – 135; Civil Disobedience as Moscow's Opportunity – 136; S. V. Deshpande's Downfall – 136; M. N. Roy's Reappearance; The Reception of Roy's Doctrines; Introspective Criticism; More Widespread Efforts; Roy's Failure in the Punjab; Roy's Arrest and Conviction; The Effect of Roy's Removal; The Comintern's Designs; "Draft Platform of Action for India"; Communist Propaganda Abroad; The League Against Imperialism – 145; Other Propagandist Bodies – 145; Anti-War Bodies – 146; A More Subdued Note – 146; The Communist Programme for 1933 – 147; Communist Agents – 147; William Nathan Kweit and Harry Somers – 148; Khushi Muhammad – 148; Henry G. Lynd – 148; Amir Haidar Khan – 149; John Magnus Clark and William Bennett – 151; The Standard of Moscow's Emissaries – 151

CHAPTER 18

After Meerut

A Review of the Position at the Beginning of 1933 – 152; New Developments – 152; Criticism from Meerut – 153; Recommendations for Future Reorganisation – 154; Suggestions to the Comintern – 154; Some Results of the Recommendations – 155; The Contents of the Open Letter – 156; Further Failures – 156; The Ahmedabad Union – 157; The Release of the Meerut Prisoners – 157; Adhikari the Specialist in Reorganisation – 158; The Provisional Central Committee – 158; Work in the Provinces – 159; Activities in Furtherance of the New Programme – 160; A New Thesis on Indian Communism – 161; The Course of the Revolution – 161; Relations with Other Groups – 162; Relations with the Terrorists – 163; Work in the Trades-Unions – 163; The United Front in Operation – 163; 'The Strike Movement in 1934 – 164; The Political Aspect – 166; The Educational Aspect – 168; Activities in Bengal – 169; The Proscription of the Communist Party of India – 170; Secretive Methods – 171; Philip Spratt's Reappearance – 172; Financial Assistance from Abroad – 173; An Indian Section of the League Against Imperialism – 173; Other Forms of Assistance – 174; A Second Meeting of the Provisional Central Committee – 174; Plans for the Immediate Future – 175
CHAPTER 19
OVERTURES TO THE NATIONAL CONGRESS

Mukunda Lal Sircar's Efforts – 177; Some Results – 177; Work in the Trades-Unions – 177; The Pursuit of Unity – 178; The Annual Session at Cawnpore – 178; The Textile Strike – 178; The All-India Socialist Party – 179; A Review of the Year's Achievements – 180; The Principles of Communist Opposition – 180; Roy's Particular Differences – 181; The Leavening of the National Congress – 182; Jawahar Lal Nehru's Co-ordinating Influence – 182; The First Fruits of Peaceful Penetration – 183; The Emergence of the Congress Socialist Party – 184; A Party Within the Congress – 184; Rebuffs from Congress Leaders – 184; Brazen Impenitence – 185; Jawahar Lal Nehru to the Rescue – 186; Preparations for the Annual Session of the Congress – 186; The Trial of Strength at Bombay – 187; An Outline of Future Activity. – 188; Roy's Promptings – 189; "Whither Congress?" – 189; Other Documents – 190

CHAPTER 20
A DANGEROUS COMBINATION

CHAPTER 21.
SIKH MILITANCY

The Kabul Centre –214; The Origin of the Ghadr Party –214; Early Communist Connexions –215; Rattan Singh's Second Visit to India –216; Sir David Petrie's Appreciation –217; A Diversion of Interest –218; The Sustenance of Effort in America –218; A Revival of Plotting –218; Teja Singh's Programme –219; Returning Emigrants –220; Reactions in the United States of America to Events in India –221; An Official Offensive; Sikh Students in Moscow –222; The Indian End –223; Outside Assistance –224; After Meerut –224; The Lahore Congress –224; Civil Disobedience –225; Harjap Singh Again –226; Dasaundha Singh –226; The Karachi Congress and After –226; The Collapse of the Movement –227; Internal Strife –228; Funds from Abroad –228; Communist Emissaries –229; The Release of the Meerut Prisoners –230; The Communist Control Board –231; Returning "Graduates" –232; Baba Jawala Singh –233; The Proscription of Communist Bodies in the Punjab –234; Conclusion –234;

PART FOUR.
Conclusions.

CHAPTER 22.
INDIA'S LEGAL ARMOURY AGAINST COMMUNISM.

CHAPTER 23.
INDIA'S RESPONSIBILITIES AND DUTIES.

Self Praise is no Recommendation –258; Russia's Foreign Policy; The Fight against Communism not Solely Waged by the Law and Police; The Future;

APPENDICES.
Appendix I 265; Appendix II 274; Appendix III 289; Appendix IV 299; Appendix V 301; Appendix VI 304; Appendix VII 307;
(Special supplement)
Note on Communist Situation in India 309

INDEX ; 341