Knowledge and Information Technology Management: Human and Social Perspectives

Table of Contents

Preface ............................................................................................................................................. 1

Section I: Introduction to Knowledge and Information Technology Management

Chapter I ........................................................................................................................................ 1
Developments in Managing Innovation, Knowledge and E-Business
Benn Lawson, The University of Melbourne, Australia
Danny Samson, The University of Melbourne, Australia

Chapter II ..................................................................................................................................... 14
Sources of Knowledge Acquisition by U.S. Managers: An Empirical Analysis
Jaideep Motwani, Grand Valley State University, USA
Pradeep Gopalakrishna, Pace University, USA
Ram Subramanian, Grand Valley State University, USA

Section II: Integration of Business and Knowledge/Information Technology Management

Chapter III ........................................................................................................................................ 30
Information Systems and Business Strategy: A Concurrent Planning Model
Antonio Torres-Perez, University of Valencia, Spain
Isidre March-Chorda, University of Valencia, Spain

Chapter IV ..................................................................................................................................... 51
Integrated QFD and Knowledge Management System for the Development of Common Product Platform
Walter W. C. Chung, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong
Colin K. S. Tam, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong
Michael F. S. Chan, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong

Chapter V ..................................................................................................................................... 72
An Expanded Model of the Effects of Organizational Culture Upon the Acceptance of Knowledge Management
Nancy C. Shaw, George Mason University, USA
Francis D. Tuggle, American University, USA
Chapter VI .............................. 89
Information-Based Integration for Complex Systems
   E. Szczerbicki, The University of Newcastle, NSW, Australia

Chapter VII ................................................. 104
An Experimental Analysis of the Effectiveness and Efficiency of Teams
with Partial Problem Domain Knowledge
   Dinesh A. Mirchandani, Grand Valley State University, USA
   Jaideep Motwani, Grand Valley State University, USA

Chapter VIII ............................................. 115
Collaboration in the Large: Using Videoconferencing to Facilitate Large-Group Interaction
   Diane H. Sonnenwald, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA
   Paul Solomon, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA
   Noriko Hara, Indiana University, USA
   Reto Bolliger, National Science Foundation STC-ERSP, USA
   Thomas H. Cox, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA

Section III: Knowledge and Information Technology Management in Virtual Enterprises

Chapter IX ................................................. 138
A Dynamic Perspective on Knowledge Creation in Virtual Teams—In a Search for New Insights
   Violina Ratcheva, The University of Nottingham, UK

Chapter X .................................................. 153
The Impact of Trust in Virtual Enterprises
   T. T. Wong, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong
   Henry C. W. Lau, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong

Chapter XI .................................................. 169
Market of Resources as an Environment for Agile/Virtual Enterprise Dynamic Integration and for Business Alignment
   Maria Manuela Cunha, Instituto Politécnico do Cávado e do Ave, Portugal
   Goran D. Putnik, Universidade do Minho, Portugal
   A. Gunasekaran, University of Massachusetts, USA

Section IV: Knowledge Management in E-Commerce Environment

Chapter XII .................................................. 192
Managing Business-Consumer Interactions in the E-World
   Sushil K. Sharma, Ball State University, USA
   Jatinder N. D. Gupta, The University of Alabama in Huntsville, USA
Chapter XIII ................................................................. 214
Electronic Money and Payment Systems
Santosh K. Misra, Cleveland State University, USA
Jayavel Sounderpandian, University of Wisconsin–Parkside, USA

Chapter XIV ................................................................. 251
A Managerial Perspective on E-Commerce: Adoption, Diffusion and Cultural Issues
Thuong T. Le, The University of Toledo, USA
S. Subba Rao, The University of Toledo, USA
Dothang Truong, The University of Toledo, USA

Section V: Human and Social Aspects of Knowledge and Information Technology Management

Chapter XV ................................................................. 268
Human and Social Perspectives in Information Technology: An Examination of Fraud on the Internet
C. Richard Baker, University of Massachusetts, USA

Chapter XVI ................................................................. 283
The Role of Trust in Information Technology Management
István Mezgár, Computer and Automation Research Institute, Hungary
Zoltán Kinceses, Eötvös Loránd University of Sciences, Hungary

Chapter XVII ............................................................... 305
Inexperienced Software Team and Global Software Team
Kim Man Lui, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong
Keith C. C. Chan, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Hong Kong

Chapter XVIII ............................................................. 324
The Knowledge Edge: Knowledge Management and Social Learning in Military Settings
Leoni Warne, Defence Science and Technology Organisation, Australia
Katerina Agostino, Defence Science and Technology Organisation, Australia
Irena Ali, Defence Science and Technology Organisation, Australia
Celina Pascoe, University of Canberra, Australia
Derek Bopping, Defence Science and Technology Organisation, Australia

About the Authors .......................................................... 354

Index ................................................................. 365