Women, Religion and Feminism in Britain, 1750–1900

Edited by
Sue Morgan

Head of the School of History
University College Chichester
Contents

Acknowledgements vi
Notes on the Contributors ix

Introduction. Women, Religion and Feminism: Past, Present and Future Perspectives
Sue Morgan 1

Part 1 Female Education and Moral Reform 21

1 'A singular injustice towards women': Hannah More, Evangelicalism and Female Education
Anne Stott 23

2 Rational Religion and Feminism: the Challenge of Unitarianism in the Nineteenth Century
Ruth Watts 39

3 'At the center of a circle whose circumference spans all nations': Quaker Women and the Ladies Committee of the British and Foreign School Society, 1813–37
Joyce Goodman and Camilla Leach 53

Part II Sexuality and Female Friendships 71

4 'The Gift of Love': Nineteenth-Century Religion and Lesbian Passion
Martha Vicinus 73

5 'Every Good Woman Needs a Companion of Her Own Sex': Quaker Women and Spiritual Friendship, 1750–1850
Sheila Wright 89

Part III Women Writers with Causes 105

6 'Afraid to be Singular': Marianne Farningham and the Role of Women, 1857–1909
Linda Wilson 107
Contents

7 Evangelicalism and Feminism.
   Josephine Butler, 1828–1906
   Helen Mathers
   123

8 Victorian Women with Causes: Writing,
   Religion and Action
   Suzanne Rickard
   139

9 Equal Questions: the ‘Woman Question’ and the ‘Drink Question’ in the Writings of
   Clara Lucas Balfour, 1808–78
   Kristin G. Doern
   159

Part IV Independent Women Missionaries

10 Ministering Angels, not Ministers:
   Women’s Involvement in the Foreign Missionary
   Movement, c. 1860–1910
   Judith Rowbotham
   179

11 Medical Missions and the History of Feminism:
   Emmeline Stuart of the CMS Persia Mission
   Guli Francis-Dehqani
   197

12 Opportunities for Baptist Women and the ‘Problem’ of the Baptist Zenana Mission, 1867–1913
   Laura Lauer
   213

Index
   231