Industrial Clusters and Regional Business Networks in England, 1750–1970

Edited by

JOHN F. WILSON
University of Nottingham, UK

ANDREW POPP
Royal Holloway, University of London, UK

ASHGATE
Contents

List of tables and figures vii
List of contributors viii
General editor's preface xi
Preface xii

1 Districts, networks and clusters in England: An introduction 1
   John F. Wilson and Andrew Popp

2 An economic approach to regional business networks 19
   M.C. Casson

3 The Manchester industrial district, 1750–1939: Clustering, networking and performance 44
   John F. Wilson and John Singleton

4 Networks, corporate governance and the decline of the Lancashire textile industry, 1860–1980 68
   Steve Toms and Igor Filatotchev

5 Much ado about nothing? Regional business networks and the performance of the cotton and woollen textile industries, c.1919–c.1939 90
   Sue Bowden and David Higgins

6 Banks, communities and manufacturing in West Yorkshire textiles, c.1800–1830 112
   Steven Caunce

7 Capital networks in the Sheffield region, 1850–1885 130
   Lucy Newton
CONTENTS

8 Quaker networks and the industrial development of Darlington, 1780–1870
   Gillian Cookson
   155

9 The British glove industry, 1750–1970: The advantages and vulnerability of a regional industry
   Richard Coopey
   174

10 ‘Malefactors and Honourable Men’: The making of commercial honesty in nineteenth-century industrial Birmingham
    Francesca Carnevali
    192

11 Networks and industrial restructuring: The Widnes district and the formation of the United Alkali Company, 1890
    Andrew Popp
    208

12 Business networks, social habits and the evolution of a regional industrial cluster: Coventry, 1880s–1930s
    Roger Lloyd-Jones and M.J. Lewis
    229

    Till Geiger
    251

14 Conclusion
    John F. Wilson and Andrew Popp
    271

Author index
    283

General index
    285