Town and country in England: frameworks for archaeological research

DOMINIC PERRING

with contributions by
MARK WHYMAN,
FRANCES CONDRON,
JONATHAN FINCH,
AND REBECCA ROSEFF

CBA RESEARCH REPORT 134
COUNCIL FOR BRITISH ARCHAEOLOGY 2002
Contents

List of figures vii
List of tables viii
Acknowledgements ix
Summaries xi

1 Introduction 1
1.1 Town and country in England 1
1.2 Some general models of relationships between town and country 2
1.3 The contribution of archaeology to the study of urban hinterlands 4
1.4 Frameworks for archaeological research 4
1.5 The Urban Hinterlands project 5
1.6 Organisation of the report 7

2 The research environment 9
by Frances Condron, Dominic Perring, and Mark Whyman
2.1 Introduction 9
2.2 Definitions 9
2.2.1 Towns 9
2.2.2 Hinterlands 11
2.3 The study of settlement hierarchies 12
2.3.1 Economic models 12
2.3.2 The social context 14
2.3.3 Environmental impacts 15
2.4 A review of recent research 16
2.4.1 Models for primary urbanisation 17
2.4.2 Late Iron Age and Roman 17
2.4.3 Late Roman and sub-Roman 22
2.4.4 Early medieval 24
2.4.5 Later medieval 27
2.5 Some research questions 30
2.5.1 General themes 31
2.5.2 Iron Age and Roman 31
2.5.3 Early medieval 31
2.5.4 Later medieval 32
2.6 Summary 32
3 Classes of evidence and their potential
by Mark Whyman and Dominic Perring

3.1 Animal bone
3.1.1 The ‘life cycle’ of animal bone
3.1.2 Describing assemblages
3.2 Archaeobotanical assemblages
3.3 Ceramics
3.3.1 Pottery production, use, and discard
3.3.2 Describing assemblages
3.4 Coin
3.5 Human bone
3.6 Other categories of find
3.7 Integrated approaches to finds assemblages
3.8 Summary

4 Research frameworks

4.1 Introduction
4.2 Iron Age to Roman by Frances Condron with Dominic Perring
4.2.1 Background
4.2.2 Sample areas and databases
4.2.3 Review of previous work
4.2.4 Research proposals and conclusions
4.3 Coin and late Romano-British exchange by Mark Whyman
4.3.1 Background
4.3.2 Sample areas and databases
4.3.3 Review of previous work
4.3.4 Research proposals and conclusions
4.4 Emporia and early medieval settlement by Mark Whyman
4.4.1 Background
4.4.2 Sample areas and databases
4.4.3 Review of previous work
4.4.4 Research proposals and conclusions
4.5 Regionality and medieval landscapes by Jonathan Finch
4.5.1 Background
4.5.2 Sample areas and review of previous work
4.5.3 Research proposals
4.6 Towns and the environment by Rebecca Roseff and Dominic Perring
4.6.1 Background
4.6.2 Sample areas and databases
4.6.3 Review of previous work
4.6.4 Research proposals

5 Conclusions and recommendations

5.1 Curatorial practice and the use of the archaeological resource
5.2 Methodological recommendations
5.3 Informing research strategies

Bibliography
Index by Peter Ellis