List of illustrations—page vii
Notes on contributors—ix

Introduction PHILIPPA BERRY
& MARGARET TUDEAU-CLAYTON—1

PART ONE Knowledge, nature, history

1 Renewing the concept of Renaissance: the cultural influence of paganism reconsidered PHILIPPA BERRY page 17

2 'Wondrous force and operation': magic, science and religion in the Renaissance STEPHEN CLUCAS 35

3 (Un)natural loving: swine, pets and flowers in Venus and Adonis DYMPNA CALLAGHAN 58

PART TWO Negotiating knowledge

4 'Non canimus surdis, respondent omnia sylvae': Francis Bacon and the transmission of knowledge DAVID COLCLOUGH 81

5 Montaigne's commerce with women: 'Jusques où va la possibilité?' ELIZABETH GUILD 98

6 'This ripping of auncestors': the ethnographic present in Spenser's A View of the State of Ireland WILLY MALEY 117

PART THREE Knowing otherwise

7 Mobility and the method: from Shakespeare's treatise on Mab to Descartes' Treatise on Man MARIE GARNIER-GIAMARCHI 137

8 Covenant, coven, charm, carmen: beyond the word–image opposition ANN LECERCLE 156
CONTENTS

PART FOUR  Locating self-knowledge

9  'I do not know my selfe': the topography and politics of self-knowledge in Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair
   MARGARET TUDEAU-CLAYTON  177

10 Knowing her place: Anne Clifford and the politics of retreat
   SUSAN WISEMAN  199

Index—223