Cultures of Taste/Theories of Appetite: Eating Romanticism

Edited by

Timothy Morton

palgrave macmillan
Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Acknowledgments ix
Notes on Contributors xi
Preface xv

Introduction Consumption as Performance: The Emergence of the Consumer in the Romantic Period 1
Timothy Morton

Part I Constructions, Simulations, Cultures 19
Chapter 1. William Henry Ireland: From Forgery to Fish ’n’ Chips 21
Nick Groom
Chapter 2. The Taste of Paradise: The Fruits of Romanticism in the Empire 41
Timothy Fulford
Chapter 3. The Politics of the Platter: Charlotte Smith and the “Science of Eating” 59
Penny Bradshaw
Chapter 4. Sustaining the Romantic and Racial Self: Eating People in the “South Seas” 77
Peter J. Kitson
Chapter 5. Eating Romantic England: The Foot and Mouth Epidemic and Its Consequences 97
Nicholas Roe
Contents

Part II

Chapter 6. Hegel, Eating: Schelling and the Carnivorous Virility of Philosophy
David L. Clark

Chapter 7. Byron’s World of Zest
Jane Stabler

Chapter 8. Beyond the Inconsumable: The Catastrophic Sublime and the Destruction of Literature in Keats’s The Fall of Hyperion and Shelley’s The Triumph of life
Arkady Plotnitsky

Part III

Chapter 9. The Endgame of Taste: Keats, Sartre, Beckett
Denise Gigante

Chapter 10. A “Friendship of Taste”: The Aesthetics of Eating Well in Kant’s Anthropology from a Pragmatic Point of View
Peter Melville

Chapter 11. (In)digestible Material: Illness and Dialectic in Hegel’s The Philosophy of Nature
Tilottama Rajan

Chapter 12. Romantic Dietetics! Or, Eating Your Way to a New You
Paul Youngquist

Afterword Let Them Eat Romanticism: Materialism, Ideology, and Diet Studies
Timothy Morton

Index