CONTENTS

acknowledgements vii notes on contributors viii

introduction
Ruth Barton 1

part 1 real histories, new myths?
The Prisoner's Wife and the Soldier's Whore: Female Punishment in Irish History and Culture
Elizabeth Butler Cullingford 8

'We're not fucking Eye-talians': The Gangster Genre and Irish Cinema Lance Pettitt 25

Black and White and Collar Films: Exploring the Irish Film Archive Collections of Clerical Films Sunniva O'Flynn 39

part 2 real lives: modern Irish identities Irishness, Innocence and American Identity Politics Before and After 11 September
Diane Negra 54

Exodus, Arrival and Return: The Generic Discourse of Irish Diasporic and Exilic Narrative Films
Brian McIlroy 69

Vampire Troubles: Loyalism and Resurrection Man Steve Baker 78

part 3 real stories: narratives in fiction and non-fiction Telling Tales: Narrative, Evidence and Memory in Contemporary Documentary Film Practice
Desmond Bell 88

Telling Our Story: Recording Audiovisual Testimonies from Political Conflict
Cahal McLaughlin 100

Hyperlinks, Changelings and the Digital Fireside
Paul O'Brien 111
The Boy from Mercury: Educating Emotionally through Universal Storytelling Diog O’Connell

part 4 real places: navigating visual spaces

Topographies of Terror and Taste: the Re-imagining of Belfast in Recent Cinema
Martin McLoone

Pobal Sobail: Ros na Rún, TG4 and Reality
Ruth Lysaght

‘A Taxi from The West’: The Ireland Text in Yves Boisset’s Le Taxi mauve/
The Purple Taxi
Paula Gilligan

part 5 real paradigms: conceptualising the national

Preparing to Fail: Gender, Consumption, Play and National Identity in Irish Broadcast Media Coverage of the ‘Roy Keane affair’ and the 2002 World Cup
Marcus Free

Keeping it Imaginary, Cultivating the Symbolic Barry Monahan

appendix: interview with Stephen Rea filmography index