Contents

Introduction: Close Reading Electronic Literature ........................... 7
   Jan Van Looy & Jan Baetens (K.U.Leuven)

I. Hypertext

Stephanie Strickland’s True North: A Migration between Media ........ 27
   Joseph Tabbi (University of Illinois – Chicago)
Sutured Fragments: Shelley Jackson’s Patchwork Girl in Piecework . 39
   Elisabeth Joyce (Edinboro University of Pennsylvania)
In Search of Califia ..................................................... 53
   Raine Koskimaa (IT University of Copenhagen)

II. Internet Text

Underground Lies: Revisiting Narrative in Hyperfiction .............. 71
   Richard Saint-Gelais & René Audet (CRELIQ/Université Laval)
Stealing or giving? On Raymond Federman’s & Anne Burdick’s
Eating Books .............................................................. 71
   Jan Baetens (K.U.Leuven)
One must be Calm and Laugh: Geoff Ryman’s Web Novel 253 as a
Hypertextual Contemplation on Modernity ............................. 87
   Jan Van Looy (K.U.Leuven)

III. Cybertext

Requiem for a Reader? A Semiotic Approach to Reader and Text in Electronic Literature .................................................... 123
   Jack Post (University of Maastricht)
The Narrative of an Interface: Rethinking Hypertext Theory by Facing Design Questions .......................... 141
Paul A. Harris (Loyola Marymount University)

Hypertextual Consciousness: Notes toward a Critical Net Practice .................................................. 157
Mark Amerika (University of Colorado – Boulder)

About the Contributors ................................................. 177

Appendix: Electronic Literature on the Web .................. 181