NORTHERN ENCOUNTERS

New Directions
in North Australian History

Editor
David Carment

Charles Darwin University Press
Contents

Acknowledgements ................................................................. v

Introduction
David Carment ......................................................................... vii

Chapter 1
The History Phoenix?
Inventing a History Tradition in the Northern Territory
Ann McGrath ........................................................................ 1

Chapter 2
Seventy-Five Years On:
Revisiting the Coniston Massacre
Bill Wilson and Justin O’Brien .............................................. 25

Chapter 3
Recognising Race and Race Relations in Far North Queensland:
What Public Documents, Public Monuments and People
Say and Don’t Say
Maxine Pitts ........................................................................... 47

Chapter 4
Water Development and Pastoralism in the Northern Territory:
An Historical Overview of Bores and Cattle Numbers
Bev Phelts ............................................................................... 79
Chapter 5
The myth of Aboriginal Barbarity:
Perceptions of Colonial Women in Northern Australia
During the 1870s
Barbara Dawson ................................................................. 111

Chapter 6
The Historian as Traveller:
Leaving Home
Jinki Trevillian ................................................................. 127

Chapter 7
Ways of Remembering:
Cross-Cultural Commemoration of Early Contact in the Northern Territory
Clayton Fredericksen ......................................................... 149

Chapter 8
The Influence of Special Collections in the Development of Regional and Cultural History and Historiography:
The Future of Special Collections in the Northern Territory
Alan Davis ................................................................. 165

Chapter 9
AraDA:
Preserving the Past for the Future
Ruth Quinn & Ellen Buckland ............................................. 179

Chapter 10
The Penitentiary as Museum:
Recovering Indigenous Cultural Heritage
Sylvia Kleinert ................................................................. 195

Contributors ................................................................. 219