"In the Open"

Jewish Women Writers and British Culture

Edited by Claire M. Tylee

Newark: University of Delaware Press
Contents

Acknowledgments 7

Introduction: The Visibility and Distinctiveness of Jewish Women’s Writing in Britain 11
  CLAIRE M. TYLEE

Part I: Popular Fiction

“Ticketing oneself a Yid”: Generic Fiction, Antisemitism and the Response to Nazi Atrocities in Naomi Jacob’s Barren Metal 29
  CLAIRE M. TYLEE

“A Jewish womanhood attached to the soil . . . a new type of Jewish womanhood”: Constructions of Israel in the Fiction of Lynne Reid Banks 49
  DEBORAH PHILIPS

Ellen Galford’s “Ghost Writing”: Dykes, Dybbuks, and Doppelgangers 65
  PAULINA PALMER

Part II: The Women’s Novel

Divided Loyalties: Betty Miller’s Narratives of Ambivalence 83
  SARAH SCEATS

Bellow at Your Elbow, Roth Breathing Down Your Neck: Gender and Ethnicity in Novels by Bernice Rubens and Linda Grant 96
  DAVID BRAUNER

Motifs of Exile, Hopelessness, and Loss: Disentangling the Matrix of Anita Brookner’s Novels 110
  ARÁNZAZU USANDIZAGA

Part III: Multicultural Literature

"Gay Israels" and the "nomadic embrace":
Mina Loy Writing Race
ALEX GOODY

"The link of common aspirations": Wales in the Work of Lily Tobias
JASMINE DONAHAYE

Denise Levertov and the Poetry of Multiculturalism
DAVID FULTON

Part IV: Post-Holocaust Writing

Writing the Self: Memoirs by German Exiles, British-Jewish Women
SUE VICE

Stages of Memory: Imagining Identities in the Holocaust Drama of Deborah Levy, Julia Pascal, and Diane Samuels
SUSANNE GREENHALGH

"The pressure of what has been felt": the Poetry of Elaine Feinstein
ROSE ATFIELD

Checklist of Jewish Women Writers in Twentieth-Century Britain

Bibliography

Notes on Contributors

Index