Sport and American Society

Exceptionalism, Insularity and ‘Imperialism’

Edited by Mark Dyreson and J.A. Mangan
Contents

Sport and American Society: Exceptionalism, Insularity and ‘Imperialism’

Acknowledgement ix

Series Editors’ Foreword x

Prologue: The Paradoxes of American Insularity, Exceptionalism and Imperialism
Mark Dyreson xii

1 Benevolent America: Rural Women, Physical Recreation, Sport and Health Reform in Ante-Bellum New England
Linda J. Borish 1

2 Aggressive America: Media Nationalism and the ‘War’ over Olympic Pictures in Sport’s ‘Golden Age’
Mark Dyreson 29

3 Insular America: The NBA Began in Akron? The Midwest Conference in the 1930s
Murry R. Nelson 45

4 Integrating America: Jackie Robinson, Critical Events and Baseball Black and White
John Kelly 66

5 Exclusionary America: Jackie Robinson, Decolonization and Baseball not Black and White
John Kelly 91

6 Reformist America: ‘The Oberlin Experiment’ – The Limits of Jack Scott’s ‘Athletic Revolution’ in Post-1960s America
Tim Elcombe 115

7 Community America: Who Owns Wrigley Field?
Holly Swyers 141

8 Exceptionalist America: American Sports Fans’ Reaction to Internationalization
Sean Fredrick Brown 161
9  Rejected America: Adolfo Luque, American Interventionism and Cubanidad
    Benjamin Eastman 191

10  Challenged America: China and America – Women and Sport, Past, Present and Future
    Susan Brownell 228

11  Epilogue: ‘Empire in Denial’: An Exceptional Kind of Imperialism
    J.A. Mangan 249

Index 253